Note on the Text

In “Towards an Ontology of Media” Friedrich Kittler observes that in articulating water and air as ‘betweens’, Aristotle turned the common Greek preposition – metaxú, between – into a philosophical concept: tò metaxú, the medium. Between “absence and presence, farness and nearness, being and soul, there exists no nothing any more, but a mediatic relation” (Kittler 2009: 26). “water.under” emerges from a large web-based work called “Etheric Ocean” which reflects on the mediatic relation of human bodies and underwater sounds within the vast medium of ocean. This concrete text was produced by copying a line from a PDF of a performance script based on “Etheric Ocean” and pasting it into an email. Rather than seeing the resulting text as an inconsequential error or even a happy accident I see it as a perfectly logical outcome of an iterative and performative writing process, and a transcript of a failure to communicate between mediums as disparate as land mammals, computers, and oceans. A version of this text was performed in Dartington, Devon (UK) as part of The South West Poetry Tour (August 2016) in collaboration with S J Fowler. The video of the performance is available here <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=YJdBccXYmEo>
