

8-8-2017

Three Poems

Maureen Scott Harris

none

 Part of the Critical and Cultural Studies Commons, Literature in English, North America Commons, Nature and Society Relations Commons, and the Place and Environment Commons
Follow this and additional works at / Suivez-nous ainsi que d'autres travaux et œuvres:
<https://scholars.wlu.ca/thegoose>

Recommended Citation / Citation recommandée

Harris, Maureen S. "Three Poems." The Goose, vol. 16, no. 1, article 22, 2017, <https://scholars.wlu.ca/thegoose/vol16/iss1/22>.

This article is brought to you for free and open access by Scholars Commons @ Laurier. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Goose by an authorized editor of Scholars Commons @ Laurier. For more information, please contact scholarscommons@wlu.ca.

Cet article vous est accessible gratuitement et en libre accès grâce à Scholars Commons @ Laurier. Le texte a été approuvé pour faire partie intégrante de la revue The Goose par un rédacteur autorisé de Scholars Commons @ Laurier. Pour de plus amples informations, contactez scholarscommons@wlu.ca.

The Gulls

Those small cries—gulls in the distance—despairing. Every morning we hear them voice images from unremembered dreams.
Such moods wing through us and fly off.

Now we are bereft, almost empty.
As if at last a great wind had toppled the oak next door, the one that's broken at the top. Such space where it stood.

The Gentlemen Are Back

They announce their return with truncated song—notes broken or stretched, tuneless.
Insouciant in black hoods and woodland grey cloaks, waistcoats the colour of tomato soup, they parade and strut, keeping a certain distance from each other.

Transgress that distance and be greeted by flinging of arms, a sudden tantrum and holler.

Heads cocked, they dart and pause, listen and glean.
They know you're watching.
Their sharp black eyes give nothing back.

Reflection (Great Egret)

thin long bird
meets itself
long white neck
darting to long white neck retrieving the slender fish hermit in ragged coat treading the wavy

cloud-flecked blue sky
intent on what moves
below reflection
bird
lifts one foot leans
and steps
then again
ruffling the muddy bottom into ripple

and gap

expanding

long thin bird

wings exploding

takes flight

wings exploding

long thin bird expanding into ripple and gap ruffling

the muddy bottom

again

then steps

and leans lifts one foot above reflection intent on what moves in cloud-flecked sky hermit in ragged coat treads the wavy blue retrieves a slender fish long white neck

darting to long white neck

thin long bird meeting itself

MAUREEN SCOTT HARRIS, a Toronto-based poet and essayist, has published three collections of poetry: A Possible Landscape (Brick Books, 1993), Drowning Lessons (Pedlar Press, 2004), which was awarded the 2005 Trillium Book Award for Poetry, and Slow Curve Out (Pedlar Press, 2012). She has also published a chapbook, Waters Remembered (espresso, 2016).