

2-20-2018

Two poems

Nicholas Bradley
University of Victoria

Follow this and additional works at: <http://scholars.wlu.ca/thegoose>

 Part of the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Bradley, Nicholas (2018) "Two poems," The Goose: Vol. 16 : Iss. 2 , Article 34.
Available at: <http://scholars.wlu.ca/thegoose/vol16/iss2/34>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by Scholars Commons @ Laurier. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Goose by an authorized editor of Scholars Commons @ Laurier. For more information, please contact scholarscommons@wlu.ca.

Late Afternoon, Turn of the Year

In the mean
while, this grace

between first
light and last:

bare oaks back-
lit by weak

western sun,
black baroque

inked on sky.
This lean time,

night's trial
run. What's left?

A grey dock,
drenched by waves.

Clenched by sand,
grey rock.

Wintering

I watch the grey wash engulf the grey rock

late in the season,
late in the day,

and watch the lather
leave the rock behind.

Soon a heron
will abandon flight,

or a sandpiper,
and stalk or skitter

into sight
and then depart.

I have let go
of all but looking

at winter's turnings, let weather in

through the door of despair. As night's ash begins to fall, I see

shorebirds vanish,
the ocean recede,

the rock disappear.
The wash is still here.

NICHOLAS BRADLEY lives in Victoria, British Columbia.