"Reformation is a great historic event. It marks the beginning of a new era. Reformation prepared the way for a higher story on civilization," said Dr. Hanson at the beginning of his sermon.

Civilization had reached its height in Martin Luther's day. The people were in need of new spiritual engineers to construct for them a good Christian precept and example on which they could raise their standards of civilization. This they found in the Reformation.

Let Us Be Thanksgiving Day was instituted to celebrate the arrival in safety of the good ship "Mayflower" Thankful! with her load of Puritans who formed North America's first colonists. Since then the event has been an occasion for an annual day of giving thanks. Eleven years ago the world saw the end of one of the biggest struggles that has is true we have our class organizaever taken place since its beginning. The festival of Thanksgiving has now taken in the celebration of the armistice. Thus two great events are appropriately involved in this national event. The Pilgrim Fathers sought to free themselves from religious tyranny. The Allies sought to free themselves from secular tyranny. But we should not forget that we are not only to be thankful for these two events. Stop and consider for a moment what you really have for which you owe thanks. You may not have everything you want but you should be thankful that you have what you now possess. If you have good health you have much to be thankful for. There are many people in this world who would gladly give you some of their millions to enjoy better health. J. Pierpont Morgan has unlimited resources at his command, but when Mrs. Morgan became a victim of sleeping sickness, he found himself unable to make use of his loose millions to help her. Learn to be thankful for small as well as big things. Good health, good neighbors, trusty friends, and a good home are not matters to overlook. But why limit your giving of thanks to one day in the year. Every day something worthy of thanks takes place in your life. Why not render thanks where and when thanks are due?

The great Arctic explorer Stefansson addressed an Seeing Is Believing. assembly in Toronto recently in which address he advocated the abolition of the Arctic. According to Mr. Stefansson all that we have been taught about the Eskimo and his native land is purely fancy. The Eskimo does not live in snow houses, nor is the North Pole the coldest place on earth. Mr. Stefansson also stated that in summer the temperature was 80 degrees in the shade, and the Arctic could also boast of mosquitoes. We laugh at American tourists who come to Quebec in July and August with fur coats, snow-shoes, skiis and toboggans, but after all are we any better when it comes to knowing the Arctic country? True, our geography taught us that the Arctic was a land of ice and snow, where Eskimos dressed in furs all year round, and lived in igloos, but we were also taught that primary sources are more authoritative than secondary. So when a man, who has spent much of his time in the land of ice and snow, tells us that we have been fooled we are perhaps a little loath to change our ideas. He is shattering our dream of a land of frozen wastes, of aurora borealis, of the midnight sun, and is asking us to accept the Eskimo as a man similar to ourselves. We can believe it or we can discredit it. We can accept the fact or we can go on being fooled.

Have you ever tried to call one of the students on the telephone? If you have not tried to find our number in the directory you have missed the joys of working out a difficult puzzle. After having several faculty members, manufacturers, printers, doctors and undertakers inform you that you must have the wrong number you finally decide that maybe it isn't under the "W's". Why not try a "C"? No use! The "C's" never heard of a College in Waterloo. Well, what is to be done? There is also a Seminary; why not try the "S"? This, too, is not quite right; you must look under "L" for the Lutheran Seminary. There you will find our number is 614. Just remember the number and forget that we have a name.

Several years ago the College had an organization which comprised all the students. Due to some unknown disease (possibly inactivity) the society passed out of existence. Now there are times when questions come up with which the entire student body has to deal. In such circumstances a students' assembly is needed to handle the situation. It tions but what class shall take the initiative to call such a meeting of the students? It simply is not there! Waterloo College is in need of a students' organization and will not one of our "upper classes" take steps to the forming of such a society of "Collegians" to fill this long-felt necessity for the direction of student activities?

A Thanksgiving Message

Now that the Thanksgiving season has come upon us again, the students of the Boarding Club are reminded of the many thanks they owe. Many donations have come in from our faithful friends. These cannot be valued in money for they give the student encouragement and manifest the spirit toward the students. Your interest is appreciated and we thank our many friends for their benevolent gifts.

The programme for the evening speaks well for the President's ability to find talent among the Society.

The reading by Mr. Herman Little was interesting. By the eloquence with which he recited "Marzenwind", Mr. Koerber appeared to express his own sentiments most sincerely.

Mr. Pauli and Mr. Nolting took their fellow members with them to Europe in the reminiscences of their trip of a year ago. Mr. Pauli took the Society from Waterloo to New York and thence across the Atlantic. As soon as he reached the continent, however, he deserted his interested followers and handed the many and England where he left the world of imagination.

Most Interesting St. Matthew's Young People Hear Reformation Talk.

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 6, Miss Haug addressed the Luther A very interesting meeting was League of St. Matthew's Church, held by the Germania in the chapel Kitchener, on the topic, Luther the Reformer. Miss Haug stated that the time in which Luther lived was for the future was carried on. It ripe for reform and that Martin Luther was the product of this age. A crisis of this nature could bring forth three types of leaders, an opportunist, a doctrinaire, or a reformer. An example of an oppored to prepare speeches on given tunist is Napoleon, who did not see themes. Dr. Schorten heartily agreed the great cause of the masses, but that such a procedure would be saw only his own opportunity for greatness. An example of a docbers to consider the question before trinaire is Garrison, a leader of the anti-slavery movement in the United States. This type sees the great cause, but instead of using wisdom, used excessive courage. The latter type, the reformer, is well exemplified in Luther. He saw the great cause of humanity and used wisdom. He always preceded action with a period of deliberation. He considered the question of right and wrong and the remedy. Nevertheless. Luther was instinctively combative. The nailing of his 95 theses on the church door of Wittenburg was the decisive action, following a period of deliberation.

THE SOUL'S SMILE

Yes death must come to one and all Who in this world are born, The time will come when its dark pall

Will cause some man to mourn.

'Tis true mankind seems so afraid When life this body leaves, When man in colder clay is laid Than he at birth receives.

When man must leave this world fore'er.

And all that he possessed, To travel upward through the air Or to be Satan's guest.

Of these two ways man has the choice

Throughout his worldly years, The one will lead him to rejoice The other but to tears.

His deeds and thoughts in life may tell

The way that he will go, If he will rest in Heaven or Hell Alas, we may not know.

Yet one thing death to us can show If life was good and pure, The soul's last smile will let us know

If rest in Heaven is sure.

When man before us slowly dies His smiling lips reflect His soul on entering Paradise As one of the Elect.

Thus is there need for fear in man When death will cool the heart? For God will do all that He can If man but plays his part.

COLLEGE BASKETEERS FAILING TO HOLD LEAD SUFFER TWO DEFEATS

Both United Brethren and St. Andrew's Teams Come From Behind to Win in Closely Contested Battles of Church League.

Showing improvement in each Zammanmannumumumumumumum game, the Waterloo College basketball team twice held victory in their fingers before the final whistle blew. Both the U.B. and the St. Andrew's games were exciting throughout. At times the play became rather rough, due, no doubt, to the proximity of the rugby season.

U. B. 10 - W. C. 6

Providing a close battle in spite of their evident lack of practice, the Waterloo College Senior Church League basketball team on Saturday, Oct. 26, held the hard-checking count. The rally of the latter team esting. in the third quarter, which netted them two baskets in quick succession, was the deciding factor of the game, as the rest of the contest was fairly close.

Carrying the play into Waterloo territory immediately after the first whistle, the U.B. boys chalked up the first tally in short order. Waterloo rallied quickly, and gained their first counter on H. Scherbarth's penalty shot. From then on throughout the first half the rival basketeers provided a nip-and-tuck battle, the count being knotted at six-all at the close of the period.

In the third quarter the ball was dropped through the College hoop twice in rapid succession, ending the scoring for the remainder of the game, although both fives offered serious threats from time to time. Klinck and Scherbarth were the pick Waterloo College athletes at the beginning of the season aspired to stellar positions. So our standing was to have been published. Purple and Gold Gridders Struggle in Vain to Score.

Judging from Wednesday afternoon's game, the Waterloo College gridiron squad would soon be numbered among the victors, were the rugby season not fast drawing to a close. The 8-0 victory which their visitors, St. Jerome's, added to their laurels, was no indication Waterloo's playing.

The visitors had the kick-off and retained the ball on Waterloo's fumble. Steadily they worked their way up the field but finally the invincible Waterloo line forced them to kick, making the score 1-0. Failing to make yards, the College lost the ball and two consecutive offsides on their part brought them to a dangerous position. Here again, however, they played splendidly and kept the visitors from scoring a touch-down. They now worked their way up the field but lost the ball on a fumble.

Not many minutes after the second quarter had begun, St. Jerome's broke through the Waterloo line to score a touch-down. They failed, however, to score the convert. This made the score 6-0. Both teams now fought hard and although the College made several good plays, they failed to score.

Although both teams fought hard, neither of them scored in the third quarter. Most of the playing took place in centre field.

A safety-touch by St. Jerome's shortly after the opening of the last quarter, made the score 8-0. Not many minutes passed before the visitors again threatened to score a touch-down but lost the ball on a fumble. The College now fought hard in an effort to score but the goose-egg remained with them till the end of the game.

The line-ups were:

Beginning within the confines of room 303, a fire of mysterious origin caused great consternation in Waterloo College on the night of October 25. The stout oak portal of that sanctuary, room 303, defied the most heroic efforts of the fire department which was determined to break through and get to the root of the matter. Leading for almost forty minutes in the basketball game with St. Andrew's in the K. & W. Y.M.C.A., the College team was finally eliminated from a possible victory, due only to the lack of subs. The game throughout was fast and interesting. St. Andrew's, however, had the majority of shots, but were unable to find the basket until the last few minutes of the game. The score at the end of the game was 23-17 in favour of St. Andrew's.

Waterloo College was easily in the lead in the first period. Little scored a basket shortly after the whistle blew. This, however, was duplicated by St. Andrew's on a long shot. By good combination the College team was able to get three more baskets and only shortly before half time did St. Andrew's increase their score by four points. The aim of the College is to develop intelligent, strong and useful Christian men and women. The academic training is thorough and has a positive Christian tone. Ample opportunities are given for recreation and interscholastic games. The cost is low.

Ladies Auxiliary Furnish Rest Room For Waterloo Co-Eds

Girls Express Satisfaction and Appreciation of Ladies' Efforts.

The Ladies' Auxiliary have taken great pains for the comfort of the girls at the College. They have tastefully furnished and decorated room 202 as a rest-room and study for the "co-eds". It would be difficult to be unhappy in the cheery atmosphere created by the bright and harmonizing cretonnes.

Longingly do the eyes of the "stronger sex" peer into the roomexcept when their view is obstructed by the screen. The first object to meet their gaze is, very likely, the book-case upon which the co-eds' books are neatly and otherwise arranged. Possibly, too, they are attracted by the table and the easy chairs which promise such a delightful means of a tête-a-tête. Then again, the settee may be just within their view. As a setting for this are the curtains which give the entire room that desired effect of a woman's touch.

Not so important to the eyes of the boys as to the girls' are the oak table in the centre of the room and five equally attractive chairs either side is a lovely rug.

The women students extend their heartiest thanks to the Ladies' Auxiliary for the welcome they have been given through the sincere efforts of that worthy organization in demonstrating its motherly forethought for their comfort. -W-

Cupid Establishes

Office At Waterloo

When a revolution occurs in any social order, a condition is always evolved which meets the emergency. This historical fact has been proved at Waterloo College. Coeducation came and threw the school into a turmoil; but not for long did this state of disorder exist. Rallying to the cause, the male students Rumour has it that the amorous brought into satisfactory order.

DR. HANSON

In order to raise up such men we

- 1. Quicken a great sense of God.
- 2. Have a message of obligation.
- 3. Have a sense of destiny."

"We must quicken a great sense of God. What was it that fired the heart of that young man at the Diet of Worms, or in the cathedral at Rome? It was what he saw - the great consciousness of God."

"We must have a message of obligation. Many people say that they can live as they please because it's their life. It is not so. Life is a thing we owe, a bill which God presents for us to pay. We must develop a good sense of stewardship."

"In the third place," continued the speaker, "we must have a sense of destiny. Good friends and a good character are our greatest assets. We're going to need a new type of hero-one that will take no thought of the cost."

In conclusion, Dr. Hanson told of one of his experiences while walking over Flander's Fields. His senses were attracted by some wonderful music. He became so engrossed by it that he resolved to find out from whence it came. Going in the direcwhich are placed around it. On tion of the music, he pictured to himself some great artist's face. Another Stronghold Falls Before Co-Eds

On-rushing Invaders Pay Unique Visit to Dining Hall.

The invasion of the formerly impregnable halls of Waterloo College by the forces of co-education has proven to be as effective and complete as it was sudden. Gaining victory after victory in rapid succession, the besieging forces brought their campaign to a successful close last Thursday evening when four fair freshettes partook of the evening meal provided by the boarding club-the first human beings of feminine persuasion to sit down before that far-famed board.

The four ladies in question had been assisting with the Herculean task of decorating the gymnasium for the party of the following evening. So engrossed were they in their labors that they failed to note the flitting hours. Observing the ravenous expression creeping into the girls' eyes as supper-time approached, the boarding club treasurer stroked the budding hirsute adornment on his upper lip and extended that momentous invitation.

Harsh masculine voices about the two long tables dropped into an awkward silence as the four young ladies, escorted by a quartette of blushing, self-conscious swains, entered the dining hall and were shown to their places. The treasurer once more hunted for his mustachio with a nervous hand; the vicepresident, seeking to make a good impression, began on his repertoire of Scotch stories, and the provider fervently thanked his stars that he had remembered to wash his tie.

"This is the maddest, merriest day of all the first semester," misquoted the president as he attacked his potatoes, and from then on the meal was a decided success. The co-eds even stacked up their dishes, when their appetites were satiated, and emulating their male escorts carried them into the kitchen and arranged them there. Their last stronghold thus falling to the invaders, the boys of Waterloo College admitted defeat and bowed their heads before the inevitable.

After Graduation What?

Will you be broke and dependent upon Dad or a hastily secured job to supply your wants, or will you have an endowment nest-egg to draw upon when fortune beckons you to "start something" on your own? Be independent, and like a good general always have an emergency reserve.

Let us explain how a few cents saved during the College years will insure success after graduation.

Discords

The movie director had completed the set of a college man's room.

"Call in Bill," he ordered. "He's been to College so he can tell us if this room looks all right."

Bill, after viewing the room, remarked: "It looks O.K. to me .- Oh, wait a minute, there's something missing. Sometimes we studied."

The Morning After The Night Before

Sentinel Sleeps at the Switch; Boys Become Confused Whether It Is Breakfast or Dinner.

Friday evening, Nov. 1, proved a memorable one for the students, but "the morning after the night before" will be even more so for the students in the dormitory. On retiring in the "wee small hours of the morning" the word was passed around that the rising bell would ring as usual about 6.45. However, when the hour arrived no bell was heard. Minutes passed and still no one stirred. Just one hour later the official awakener half opened his eyes to find that he was exactly an hour late in rousing his mates. Never before had he failed them. How would be reconcile himself. In fifteen minutes classes would commence and he had not yet roused the president to call breakfast. Would he dare sound the alarm now? He must! Soon he tramped the halls furiously sounding the call amid an occasional hoot and batter of shoes and books.

A few minutes later bleary-eyed students straggled into the dining room to refresh themselves with a few morsels before dashing off to meet the professors. A number had to content themselves with merely passing through on their way to the classes. It was a hectic quarter of an hour that was soon forgotten, however, in the atmosphere of professors and classroom.
