Season's Greetings

WITH the advent of the Christmas season the spirit of Waterloo reached a hitherto unknown height. During the past few months, in studies, athletics, and dramatics, whenever the interests of Waterloo College were at stake, no energy was spared by professors and students alike, no sacrifice was too great for them. And now with the same enthusiasm and love for their Alma Mater they wish you one and all Merry Christmas! "Peace on earth; good will toward men." Truly this is a season of good will. Everyone we meet has a smile and a greeting of joy for us. The heart is full of happiness. The hand is ready to help. At this particular season the College Cord staff wishes to convey its greetings for a merry and joyful Christmas season to its numerous friends. We are truly thankful to all who have helped us in the past year by subscribing to our paper. We have tried to uphold the high standard set by our predecessors and hope that we have succeeded and have kept our subscribers interested. We appreciate the interest you have shown in our school and its work, manifested in your reading of the school paper. It is an effective way of keeping in touch with your school. May we continue to have your support and good will in the future, and may blessing, and peace and joy be measured out to you full and overflowing at this particular season, and also throughout the entire year.

Happy New Year! "Time and tide wait for no man." Year follows after year in spite of man's desire to have them linger. We will soon be standing on the threshold of a new year. Our gaze may turn forward or back. When we look back upon the old year, what do we see? Let us not look upon what we have accomplished. What has been left undone can never be done. We have missed our opportunity. Grieving over opportunities lost, will never change matters. It will only lead to despair and lack of confidence. Let us rather look upon what we have done. It may not have been much, but he who attends to the smaller things shall be worthy of the greater. Let us look forward. We have learned by our mistakes. The man who learns will never make the same mistake twice. The new year will show what the old has profited you. Your vision of the future may be vague or dim, but standing on the threshold you are ready to enter courageously, determined to profit from your failures in the old year. "Let the dead past bury its dead." The old is gone; the new shall be a fresh start.

Santa Claus Pays Unexpected Visit to Faculty Members

Christmas Eve Gathering Presented With Appropriate Gifts.

As a distant church bell sweetly proclaimed the fact that it was twelve o'clock in the night of nights, Christmas Eve, Dr. Schorten awoke from a troubled slumber with a start. Drowsily he gazed about his cosy living room, at the forms of the various professors of the College and Seminary, recumbent in their respective chairs, in which they had fallen asleep. Then, as his roving and still sleepy gaze passed from the glowing fire-place, where the cheery flames still played lazily about the half-burnt logs, to the Christmas tree in the corner of the room, an exclamation of astonishment burst from the lips of the venerable professor. Fully awake now, he recalled the remarks of the professors who, gathering in his house that evening, had ridiculed the belief of the existence of that merry gentleman from the North Pole who gladdens the hearts of young and old every Yuletide. When their scepticism had been fully exhausted, the savants, yielding to the soporific effects of a warm room, a gladsome fire-place and perhaps an occasional cigar, had one by one fallen asleep. And now the House Father, the first of that select gathering to drive the mists of sleep from his brain, fully realized that Santa Claus, the fabled figure in whose existence they had refused to believe, had proved himself by coming in the midst of their slumbers. Eagerly he awakened his confrères and together the group hurried to the gleaming Christmas tree to explore the delightful mysteries which St. Nicholas had left.

By right of his superiority, Dean W. C. Froats first opened the package which was addressed to him. An expression of profound satisfaction appeared on his countenance when he unwrapped a beautifully bound volume containing the works of the leading authors of Classical Roman days. "Mihi placet, mihi placet," he chuckled happily. When someone, suffering badly from indigestion, sourly made the

STUDENT PRESENTATION OF "THE BUTTER AND EGG MAN" PLEASES LARGE AUDIENCE

Cast Presented Difficult Comedy With Rare Dramatic Ability.

Displaying a wealth of dramatic talent seldom seen in an amateur company, the students of Waterloo College on December 10 presented "The Butter and Egg Man," the comedy sponsored by the Class of '30. The audience which almost filled the spacious Kitchener-Waterloo Collegiate auditorium, appreciating the play to the utmost, by means of its hearty applause bestowed the stamp of approval upon the efforts of the local players. From the viewpoint of both the spectators and the actors, the presentation was a complete success, and more than fulfilled the expectations of its sponsors.

The scene of the first act is the office of Lehmack Productions, Inc., in New York. Joe Lehman and Jack McClure, recently graduated from the vaudeville business, are endeavoring to produce a legitimate play, but lack funds. A young man fresh from an Ohio town, and the sole support of his widowed mother, is discovered in possession of funds he had inherited and of a desire to enter the show business. The lamb is quickly sheared. The young investor soon discovers that he is only a "Butter and Egg Man," a person who foolishly invests money in doubtful enterprises. However, he takes command of the business, buying out the other partners, and makes the show a success. But a suit for plagiarism follows. However, profiting by his previous sad experience, our hero is keen enough now to sell back the production to the original owners for a vast sum. The happy ending follows.

Deserving of special mention in the cast were Glenn Bossenberry and Jack Smithson, who had the roles of the two showmen, Lehman and McClure. They acted in a manner worthy of veteran professionals, and instilled much "pep" into the play. Dorothy Tailby drew applause in the role of Fanny Lehman, sharp-tongued wife of the unscrupulous Joe. Elizabeth Spohn scored effectively in the part of Jane Weston, the stenographer who is the "Butter and Egg Man's" weakness. Mary Martin, temperamental leading lady of the Lehmack Productions, was ably portrayed by Verna Lauman. Lloyd Schaus made an admirable Butter and Egg Man, playing his difficult role almost to perfection. Harold Crouse was the thirst-mingling waiter, and Fred Bermon proved the correct type for the part of the aristocratic Cecil Benham, manager of the Lehmack play. Walter Goos, of course, made a hit in the role of Bernie Sampson, New York theatre expert, while Margaret Lockhart did well as his "side-kick," the belligerent Peggy Marlowe, Margery Tailby was a typical "hello girl," and, according to Mac, supplied a "hot lot of news." Much of the comedy in the latter part of the play was supplied by Walter Koerber in the role of Oscar Fritchie, slow-thinking but determined hotel manager. Arthur Buehlow, aided by his extensive forehead and determined stride, was a fear-inspiring lawyer—pardon—attorney-at-law.

Behind the scenes there were also several personages who contributed in no small part to the success of the play and formed an able executive staff. Mr. Oscar Rumpel of Kitchener, as director, gave the presentation the finishing touch. The guiding spirit of the production from the time of the first suggestion to the last curtain was without doubt Prof. Carl Klinck, who acted as faculty adviser. Giving unsparingly of time and energy, George W. Orth successfully carried the heavy responsibility of general manager. He was ably assisted by Miss Louise Twietmeyer as property manager; Fred H. Goos, business manager; Edward G. Neigh, advertising manager, and Lloyd Herman, stage manager.

The play was one of the most enjoyable ever presented by Waterloo College, and as a result those who witnessed it will look forward with pleasure to next year's effort.

Cord to Conduct Letter Box For Student Problems

Services of Miss Ophelia Pultz Have Been Secured.

Beginning with the next issue, the College Cord will reserve a space for the intimate discussion of problems affecting the life of Waterloo College students. This section will be called "Heart Throbs," and will be conducted by Miss Ophelia Pultz, whose lengthy experience in Young People's work has equipped her with a comprehensive knowledge of the trials and worries of youth. Ophelia Pultz is considered to be Dorothy Dix's only rival. Any student wishing to receive mature and competent advice on any problem, amorous or otherwise, is invited to send a letter to "Heart Throbs," in the care of this paper. All letters sent in must be correctly signed, but, if the remitter so desires, a nom-de-plume may be used when the letter and answer are published. Don't be bashful. Let Ophelia Pultz solve your problems.

Resident Students Make Merry at Annual Christmas Banquet

Annual Event of Boarding Club Greatly Enjoyed.

The aroma of "El Ropo" cigars, which, by the way, are a perfect blend of Mexican and Spanish tobaccos, filled the rooms of many resident students. The reason for this is not that the students have been spending foolishly, but that the yearly Boarding Club banquet has just gone down in the annals of Waterloo College as a most successful event. The cigars, of course, were given out gratis.

Seated before tables which were, to express it literally, groaning under the weight of excellently prepared food, the members of the Boarding Club satisfied their appetites, the demand of which were, in anticipation of the banquet, denied during the last few days. Geese, which a week before had enjoyed the peace and contentment of some farmer's barn, adorned, in a roasted condition, the centre of the table. The programme was of the very highest order.

The toast to the king and country was offered by Harold Crouse. In a few well chosen words he pointed out many Canadian and British privileges and advantages. Fred Haak replied to this toast in a very fitting manner. The main theme of his speech was the expression of his pride in having become a Canadian citizen. The toast to the school was offered by Walter Koerber. In a short address he pointed out some of the advantages which students at Waterloo College enjoy. He also stressed the fact that comparative inattention is given to the development of music. The Boarding Club realized this point and called upon Fred Haak to give an accordion solo. This was very much enjoyed and reflected much credit upon the player. Music was also supplied throughout the evening by a radio which Mr. Dannecker of the Electric Service Company, Waterloo, very kindly loaned to the club. All the members of the club feel very grateful to him for his generous help in making the evening a success. The College quartette, composed of Alvin Pauli, first tenor, William Nolting, second tenor, Walter Koerber, first bass and Fred Haak, second bass, sang three numbers very effectively. The toast to the ladies was proposed by Edward Neigh and answered by Fred Goos. Both these young gentlemen are "in the know" when it comes to matters concerning the fairer sex. Their speeches bore out this fact to the fullest extent. Walter Goos, the amiable and diminutive president of the club, acted as toastmaster.

The Celibate

Who is it makes the co-eds frown?
And who is now in high renown,
As sentiment he crushes down?
The celibate.

Who is it eschews females all,
And says he'll not be held in thrall
By woman, at her beck and call?
The celibate.

Who breaks the vows he swore to keep,
And makes his fellow-bachelors weep
As they their lonely vigil keep?
That reprobate!

52 KING S. - WATERLOO
"In the Hub"

Dormitory Dragnet

Seeing in the rehearsals of "The Butter and Egg Man" an unexcelled opportunity to bring loving hearts together and get the co-eds all settled down, the Matrimonial Bureau of Waterloo College employed Lucan C. Aughl, dormitory House Detective, to keep an attentive eye on the players during the practices. No development along amorous lines escaped the notice of the far-famed sleuth who, upon receiving the assignment, immediately began to attend every rehearsal. Aughl continued to shadow the five co-eds who had been given roles in the play, even after it was over, and due to his exhaustive research four possible unions were brought to the attention of the Bureau. In two of these instances, however, Cupid's arrow was weak, but in the remaining two cases the results have appeared to be permanent.

The first possibility reported to those who guide the amorous developments of Waterloo College, by Aughl, was that of the young lady who had played the role of the telephone operator, in "The Butter and Egg man." The Matrimonial Bureau expended every effort to link the young lady with one of the male players and, for a time, it appeared as though success were smiling upon that august body. A romance seemed to be budding, but clouds soon appeared in the hitherto sunny matrimonial sky, and an estrangement occurred. The fickle damsel, on a bus trip to a basketball game, deserted the ardent swain for another.

The second romance marked by Aughl and duly reported to his employers also petered out, after a promising beginning. Two persons who had played opposite each other on the stage continued rehearsing after the practices. The little pair had been followed home several times by Aughl, and everything seemed to be running smoothly. However, after the play, the affair, for no apparent reason, became past history.

The Bureau obtained more success in its handling of the third tentative romance dutifully reported by the detective. None other than the business manager of the play was snared, and that in a very decisive manner. Impartial observers declare that the sound of his fall could be heard for approximately five blocks. Under the skilled manipulation of the Bureau, the fervor of his cooings of the two turtle doves concerned is increasing day by day.

The Matrimonial Bureau also scored a victory on the last case reported by the sleuth. As is often the case in stage production, the

College Alumni News

Merry Christmas to Everyone!

As usual there is little news. The hope goes out that Santa may be good to every Alumnus and bring him a fountain pen, some stationery and a few stamps.

Rev. A. Datars and "Bill" Schweitzer wrote short notes to Earle Shelley last week, consequently there is some news to report.

Rev. Datars writes: "The part of the country in which I now live is quite different from that surrounding Waterloo. There has been so much snow here that at times church services were cancelled because the roads were made impassable. You might wonder how I go from place to place. The congregation which I serve is a very grateful one, consequently the pastor has the use of a horse."

"Ab" has asked that his subscription to the College Cord be renewed. He also states that this year instead of attending the Boarding Club banquet he will be president, treasurer and provider of his own Boarding Club. Are you losing any weight, "Ab"?

"Bill" Schweitzer writes that this semester he taught at Jarvis Street High School and next semester he will teach at the University of Toronto Schools. He is specializing in Physical Training and has a school hockey team under his supervision. On Friday last he attended the University Christmas dance and enjoyed himself greatly.

Bill writes, "I had my right wisdom tooth extracted for one dollar." Cheap at double the price, "Bill," but how did you sprout it?

Start off the New Year right by writing the Alumni Reporter bi-weekly. Just a note from each Alumnus and this column would be interesting. The reporter guarantees this if you will fulfill your contract.

leading man and leading lady fell prey to each other's charms. At first, of course, these excursions up-town together and the frequent practices of the various amorous scenes in the play were purely in the domain of business, but later, that alibi could scarcely be offered. The work of the Matrimonial Bureau in this union was fully as successful as in the case of the business manager, and the results appear to be absolutely permanent.

Girl Basketeers Make Remarkable Showing In Initial Attempt

Game With K.-W. Collegiate Lost by Close Margin.

The Girls' Basketball team gave a realistic example of "victory in defeat" when they played the Kitchener-Waterloo Collegiate team in the Collegiate gymnasium on Monday last. Although the Collegiate team sunk the winning basket in a hectic see-sawing battle, the College co-eds also had tasted the fruits of victory for their able performance had surprised themselves and their supporters. At various stages of the game the score was tied. Now the one, now the other team was leading. Until the last second of play it was anyone's game, and it was one of those long, chance shots that won for the Collegiate.

The first quarter passed before the College found out where the basket was hung, while the Collegiate had tallied eight points. Waterloo now awoke. Betty Spohn scored on a fine pass from D. Tailby, followed soon after by another basket by the latter. The Collegiate managed to find the basket again, but then Marg. Lockhart dropped the ball through the hoop twice in succession. When the K. C. I. added another counter it was just too much for Marg. Lockhart and she retaliated with another basket. With Waterloo coming strong, the period ended 12-10 in favour of the Collegiate.

Waterloo was away with a bang in the opening of the third quarter and Marg. Lockhart tied the score. The Collegiate again took the lead with two baskets. The co-eds had tasted victory, and both Betty Spohn and Marg. Lockhart again registered for Waterloo. At three-quarter time the score was again tied at 16-16.

The excitement was now tense; everyone was on edge; it was anyone's game. With the opening of the last period Dorothy Tailby made a true pass to "go-getting Marg." who evaded the defense and scored. Waterloo was now leading, but before long the Collegiate again tied the score at 18-18. The pace was terrific, every player gave her best. Verna Lauman defied anyone to break through the defence. And then in the dying moments of the game the Collegiate sunk that winning basket from near centre, making the score 20-18 in the Collegiate's favour.

Waterloo College Loses Two Successive Games in O.A.B.A. League.

Brantford basketeers proved themselves too good for the Waterloo College team in two successive games in the O.A.B.A. schedule. In spite of the evident superiority of their opponents the Waterloo coterie gave of their best and fought until the very end.

The Home Game

The first game was played in Kitchener at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday, Dec. 7. Herman Little began the scoring and was soon followed by a counter from the hands of Klinck. Brantford, suddenly awakening, retaliated with two baskets. Scherbarth added another for Waterloo, but Brantford took the lead when they made three baskets in a row. With another score by Little for Waterloo and

Waterloo Represented At Western Rugby Dance

Mr. George Orth represented Waterloo College at the annual Rugby Dance sponsored by the Athletic Association of the University of Western Ontario, which was recently held at the Winter Gardens, London. This is the first time that Waterloo College was represented.

Mr. Orth reports that he had a wonderful time and that everything was simply marvellous. He also added that not a little surprise and delight was shown that Waterloo College was at last represented.

Athletic Distinction Achieved By Local Co-ed

Another student of Waterloo College won distinction, when at the commencement of the local Collegiate, Miss Elizabeth Spohn, ladies' Physical Director at Waterloo College, and prominent athlete, was awarded the girls' senior field-day championship.

Miss Spohn has shown her athletic prowess at the College in basketball and badminton, and will, no doubt, bring honours to the College in future years through her athletic endeavour.

Early Scoring Wins For St. Jerome's

Junior Hockey Team Caught Off Guard in First Period; Hold Opponents Scoreless in Second and Third.

On Thursday evening, Dec. 12, the Waterloo College Junior City League hockey team made its first appearance in the Kitchener auditorium. Here they met worthy rivals, the "Bookworms of St. Jerome's College." This meeting was not to the advantage of Waterloo College as the St. Jerome's team was able to obtain two counters in the first few minutes of the game. This unhappy occurrence woke up the Waterloo Collegians with the result that the St. Jerome's team was not able to slip in another tally for the rest of the game.

Eight minutes after the game started, Spooner, the St. Jerome's star centre, rushed through the Waterloo defense and scored the first goal of the evening. The game became rather rough and St. Jerome's suffered the first penalty. Five minutes after the first goal was netted Spooner made another rush and was able to bag the second tally of the game. This was followed by a penalty against Waterloo College. The score at the end of the first period was 2-0 in favour of St. Jerome's.

The second period opened with close checking on both sides. Combination playing was conspicuous by its absence on both teams.

Waterloo College went on the ice for the third time with super-determination. But try as they might, they were not able to pass the St. Jerome's defence. Likewise the Waterloo College defense very effectively kept the players of the opposing team from getting behind the blue line. The score at the end of the game was 2-0 for St. Jerome's.

With the addition of a few new players on the team and a little practice the Waterloo College puck-chasers should be able to present a very strong obstacle to the Granites, whom they will oppose on their return from the vacation on the 7th of January.

The line-up:

St. Jerome's College—Goal, Skillen; defence, Connolly and Hoegel; centre, Spooner; wings, Grant and Kuntz; subs, Poulin, Zimmer and Wilson.

Waterloo College—Goal, Imrie; defence, C. Laing and Enns; centre, Shantz; wings, Albrecht and Behling; subs, F. Laing and Prouse.

"Peace and Good Will"

By Leland H. Schweitzer

Jed drew the collar of his coat closer about his neck and turned to face the wind on his homeward way. He was late. The last job of wood-piling had been unexpected and had taken him longer than he calculated. But mother would be waiting with supper. A warm glow came with the thought and instinctively Jed quickened his steps.

He was thinking, too, of tomorrow—Christmas Day—and the good dinner he knew to be on the way. Then there was the stack of unopened packages, the contents of which would be disclosed in the light of Christmas morning. Jed remembered all the prospective cheer: he "counted his blessings" as he braced himself against the wind and told himself that he ought to be a happy boy, and would be if only—he closed his lips firmly at that stage of his thought.

It was two days since he had quarrelled with Harold, and they had been dark days to Jed. Harold had been his chum ever since his coming to the village to live. This was their first quarrel and it was going rather hard with Jed. Somehow all the comfort and joy of the waiting home were shadowed by it. "But Hal was to blame; he was just as unfair as he could be!" Jed told himself repeatedly as he pushed his way through the storm.

As he passed the lighted church, a few late workers were coming out. Through the opened door Jed caught sight of the arch they had built over the pulpit for the Christmas service. The inscription on the arch, "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men," stood out in bold relief.

Good will to men! Jed paused. Of course that meant well, not bitterness and censure, no matter what Harold had done or said. Jed knew that the place which might be in such rich measure in his own heart at this time was chilled and dwarfed because of the absence of "good will." The two went together. He felt still that his friend had been unfair, but, after all—

Jed suddenly turned the corner that led to Harold's home, and, when he reached it, gave the familiar tap on the door.

Harold was in the doorway on that instant. It seemed as if he had been waiting and watching for the signal. Jed held out his hand. "Let's forget it, Hal," coming right to the point in straight-forward, boyish fashion. "It's—it's Christmas, you know, and we—" He stopped there, knowing instinctively that his friend understood.

And Harold understood. His hand shot out to meet the extended one. "You bet!" was his hearty response. Then: "I was in the wrong, Jed; I know that—and it's game of you to make this move."

Thus a happy Christmas—"peace on earth"—was realized by two hearts because one was open to the divine power of "good will to men."

two more for Brantford, the period ended.

The first basket of the second half was a spectacular shot by Buehlow, who rushed up and shot from centre. The game was practically decided when Brantford scored four successive baskets. An additional point was contributed to the Waterloo list on a free shot by F. Goos. Before Waterloo had a chance to reduce their opponent's lead, the game ended in favour of Brantford by a score of 22-11.

Waterloo College at Brantford

The College team was accompanied by a number of basketball enthusiasts on their trip to Brantford. However, all inspiration seemed to be in vain. Brantford succeeded in gaining a good lead during the first period. Klinck found the hoop on the wall several times and Goos also helped to boost the score so that at half-time the game stood 15-8 in favour of Brantford.

In the second period, Orth, the latest addition to the Waterloo team, started action with a basket. Brantford repeated their first period tactics and increased their lead. Klinck and Goos scored again, and just before the final whistle blew Buehlow made everyone gasp with one of his famous long shots which found its goal, ending the game in Brantford's favour 29-16.

Juniors Present Novel Program Before Athenaeum

One-Act Play Was Feature Number of Program.

The Junior Class of Waterloo College has indeed established a prestige for the future meetings of the Athenaeum Society. The program of the 5th of December, sponsored by the Class of '31, was excellent, and will have a lasting effect on those who were fortunate to attend.

An introductory address was given by Mr. Hubert Casselman. He reviewed in a forceful manner his first impressions of Waterloo College and the Athenaeum Society. After praising very highly the officers who were at the head of this society when he first came to Waterloo, the speaker said, "The aim of our society is to develop literary talent, but in past years, I think we have neglected the dramatic qualities to some extent. This is what we, the Class of '31, are going to try to give you to-night."

The President of the Class, Mr. Julius Neff, gave a brief talk on "What poetry can mean to the individual." "So many people," the speaker narrated, "can't see anything more in a rainstorm than a cloudy sky." Concluding, Mr. Neff remarked: "Poetry offers us the real appreciation of our every day life." Song sheets were handed out and the audience showed their musical talent by singing popular and old-time songs. They were accompanied by Miss Lauman at the piano. Especially amusing was the song, "Among My Souvenirs" sung by the Celibates of the College. Surprising it certainly was that nobody got up and left during their rendition.

In a little one-act play, the Juniors rounded off the evening. The play entitled "The Poet Passes" is the story of a poet and a gentleman-robber who enters a lady's apartment and gains the upper hand on another burglar. The play was well presented. Miss Twietmeyer, in a commendable manner, played the part of the Lady, who was being robbed. Mr. F. Goos appeared as a poet and gentleman-robber while Mr. Casselman acted as the burglar.

THE CHRISTMAS-TIDE

Christmas eve! and the church bells pealing, pealing,
And softly, wafted snowflakes floating gently down.

White-covered figures, stagg'ring with parcels, stealing Stealthily in and out about the town.

A great tree in the centre, sparkling with radiant light,
Vieing with stars above it, in breaking up the night.

Childish whispers of "Santa," thrilled with ecstatic fear,
Last minute bundles and hurrying,
with the old, old wish of the year.

And soon 'twill be Christmas,
Christmas!

And your heart will be glad with song,

As you join in the early carols,
And send the "Peace on Earth"
along.

That those who are glad, may be gladder,

And those who are not so blest,
May hear your low, sweet carol,
And in their hearts find rest.

remark that some of the famous Latin authors were not worth reading, the Dean reproved him, saying, "De mortuis nihil nisi bonum."

A box of cigars met Dr. Schorten's pleased gaze as he unwrapped his gift from Santa. And with his favorite smokes was a box of maple buds. As he carried his presents back to his chair, a piece of paper fluttered from the package and fell to the floor. On picking it up and reading it, the Professor discovered it to be an advertisement for a burglar alarm system. The doctor chuckled and remarked, "Ist gut. Wenn wir das haetten, koennten wir wissen wann die Nachtschwaermer morgens Heim kommen."

Professor Henkel, next in line, regarded the bulky parcel which was his, with some surprise. After turning it over and examining it for some time, he finally ventured to open it at the end. "Na ja," he muttered to himself, "also, I can my horse now feed with this oats."

Professor S. Hirtle's gift was discovered to be a ponderous treatise, beautifully bound in Morocco, and labelled, "A criticism of the Apocryphal and Pseudepigraphal writings expressed in a clarified conciseness, a compact comprehensibility, a coalescent consistency, and a concatenated cogency." The professor's eyes gleamed as he perceived the prize he had bagged. "Aha," he ob-

College Play Attracted Many From Far and Near

The reputation which Waterloo College holds as a producer of plays was shown to be increasing with each successive year. Besides the large score of Kitchener and Waterloo patrons who came to see "The Butter and Egg Man," no small number of visitors were present from the surrounding towns and cities. Preston, Elmira, Stratford and Galt were reported as having been represented. Of course Rev. Arthur Mehlenbacher and a large number of his Guelph Luther Leaguers could not have been missed.

served, "I can accept that, if you please." He paused, and then queried, "What do you think of it?"

But most delighted of them all was Prof. R. J. E. Hirtle, Mathematics and Science professor, when he received the desire of his heart—his dearest wish. Santa, truly gauging his desires, had left him a goniometer. Immediately Professor Hirtle began to explain the operation of this delicate instrument. "Drawr any line, and make an angle, and then you can measure it with this," he declared. "It's correct every time, see, see, because it hasn't a flawr."

Professor Shelley's gift was a small whistle. He appeared satisfied, and observed, "It will be pozzible for me to whistle chickens to me with this now, and conzequently I won't have to employ the method we discovered in our English 22 course."

The last of that select group to explore the mysteries of his stocking was Professor Klinck. To his surprise, he discovered his sole present to be a violent and rude alarm clock. The professor blushed painfully. "I guess Santa didn't get my letter after all. But anyway, I'll be able to get to class on time now, don't you see?" He paused, nervously, and then after brief consideration, added, "Now that's important. I want to emphasize that."

The distant church bell once more tolled the hour as the merry group broke up. In spite of the disappointment experienced by one or two in the gifts they had received, it was a happy gathering which, after a few old songs and Christmas carols, dispersed. The savants sought their respective beds, their former cynicism defeated, happy in the knowledge that that Santa Claus whom they had always believed a myth really exists.

After Graduation What?

Will you be broke and dependent upon Dad or a hastily secured job to supply your wants, or will you have an endowment nest-egg to draw upon when fortune beckons you to "start something" on your own? Be independent, and like a good general always have an emergency reserve.

Let us explain how a few cents saved during the College years will insure success after graduation.

Discords

The Discorder had a sneaking suspicion that if he could travel with the Intelligentsia to Brantford he would secure some good material for his column. Consequently, as the special bus pulled out from the College on Wednesday evening he was securely secreted under one of the seats. He kept his mouth shut and his ears wide open, and, although the amount of wide open space was the same in each instance, managed to collect a few passable jabs and some pun-k stuff for which he endured considerable pun-ishment. Here's a few results of a limerick craze which hit the bus:

There was a young lady from Hohner,

"—" thought he would like to own 'er.

He took her on the bus,
She kicked up a fuss,
And found she had pulled a boner.

There was a young fellow named
Art,
Who had great trouble with his heart,

With one hand on the wheel,
He could do a great deal.
And they carried him home in a cart.

There was a young fellow called
Walter
Who should have been put in a halter

At the age of ten
He went to the "Sem."
And now he is singing the psalter.

Early in the morning in the dining-room:

"Where can I sit for breakfast
this morning?"

"Sit in Lotz's place, there's lotz a room there."

"Say, if there's anything we ain't gonna have none of, it's wise cracks!"

"Why's that?"

Somebody cracked a joke on Neff, and Carl thought it was kind of nefarious. Get it?

"Are we having eggs for breakfast?"

"Eggs-actly."

"That's a good yoke."

"Yo' can be eggs-cused now."

"Yo' can beat it yourself."

"Was that the phone ringing?"

"No, it was just a phoney noise."

Little boy (rushing in): "Mother, mother! The bank failed and dad lost his balance and—broke his fishing rod and his leg, and he's coming home in an ambulance."

Mother: "Gracious! What a fright you gave me at first."
