The Goose

Volume 14 No. 2 Tenth Anniversary Issue

Article 43

3-1-2016

Neanderthal Dig

Don McKay

Part of the Critical and Cultural Studies Commons, Literature in English, North America Commons, Nature and Society Relations Commons, Place and Environment Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Follow this and additional works at / Suivez-nous ainsi que d'autres travaux et œuvres: https://scholars.wlu.ca/thegoose

Recommended Citation / Citation recommandée

McKay, Don. "Neanderthal Dig." The Goose, vol. 14 , no. 2 , article 43, 2016, https://scholars.wlu.ca/thegoose/vol14/iss2/43.

This article is brought to you for free and open access by Scholars Commons @ Laurier. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Goose by an authorized editor of Scholars Commons @ Laurier. For more information, please contact scholarscommons@wlu.ca.

Cet article vous est accessible gratuitement et en libre accès grâce à Scholars Commons @ Laurier. Le texte a été approuvé pour faire partie intégrante de la revue The Goose par un rédacteur autorisé de Scholars Commons @ Laurier. Pour de plus amples informations, contactez scholarscommons@wlu.ca.

from Larix by Don McKay

Neanderthal Dig

1.

When we dug up the grave
we found a child's bones laid on a great swan's wing.
They had never been, we thought,
the sharpest flints in the cave,
with thick skulls evolving toward NFL helmets. We'd applied their name (from Neander Vale, site of the first remains we found) to racists, sexists, and dull bureaucrats.

Now we stood abashed trespassers on grief, thoroughly sapiens with artful implements and wit.

What would it be like to be so stricken, with few words to call on heaven, hell, hope, grief? And what sharp words might we, the clever cousins muster for the child who one day watched a Mute Swan (wingspan: five feet) lift from the river in two white swipes of Paleolithic air?

2.

What manner of wreath might honour this death? Some wing of language entering earth?

Wherever you're gone may your spirit wander wild as a swan in the Vale of Neander. DON McKAY has published numerous books of poetry and several books of essays. The poetry has been recognized with a number of awards, including two Governor General's Awards and the Griffin Poetry Prize. His most recent books of essays, The Shell of the Tortoise, received the BMO Winterset Award for Excellence in Newfoundland and Labrador Writing for 2011. Paradoxides is his most recent publication. His collected poems, Angular Uniformity, appeared in 2014. He lives in St. John's, Newfoundland. "Neanderthal Dig" is from Lexis, Vallum Chapbook Series No. 18, Montreal, Quebec, 2015.

Photo: LISA SZABO-JONES flight ©2016