A Collaboration of Poetry and Art: The Krill Kill Project

Diane Guichon
University of Lethbridge, Calgary Campus

Sarah Melanie Harrill

Recommended Citation / Citation recommandée

This article is brought to you for free and open access by Scholars Commons @ Laurier. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Goose by an authorized editor of Scholars Commons @ Laurier. For more information, please contact scholarscommons@wlu.ca.
Cet article vous est accessible gratuitement et en libre accès grâce à Scholars Commons @ Laurier. Le texte a été approuvé pour faire partie intégrante de la revue The Goose par un rédacteur autorisé de Scholars Commons @ Laurier. Pour de plus amples informations, contactez scholarscommons@wlu.ca.
Krill Kill

As warming waters rise to flood beaches in Hawaii where bikinis and board shorts sporting palm trees used to lie soaked in oil,

I feel hope crest in the enduring indifference krill possess for humans killing each other over gods and oil tankers and sanctimonious ideologies; the vulnerable line shores while the earth worm persists.

    Each possesses both egg and sperm sex organs:
hermaphroditic acrobatic intersex, and while some spotted or striped four-legged mammal stampedes across the Serengeti long after droughts fail, the hummingbird teases us as she looks back over her shoulder telling us — flit off.

We, the insignificant species, self-centered, we crave attention from an Earth indifferent to our needs —
it drives us crazy.

The last mollusk frolic or sea otter floating won’t give a second thought for our scramble to adhere to land.

The planet fills with empty feelings, not even disdain, when we flounder.
DIANE GUICHON (Poet) is a M.A. graduate (2006) from the University of Calgary’s Creative Writing Program. Her first book of poetry Birch Split Bark won the City of Calgary W.O. Mitchell 2007 Book Prize. She teaches English Literature and Academic Writing for the University of Lethbridge's Calgary Campus and Poetry Writing (online) for the University of Calgary. Diane mentors youth writers in a local youth reading series and volunteers at an emergency shelter for women escaping domestic violence.

SARAH M. HARRILL (Artist) is a BFA graduate (with Honours, 2017) from The Alberta College of Art and Design. Her art practice uses surrealist ideas to comedically approach her questions about our innate connections and voids with human nature. Sarah has participated in various art shows such as it is at Truck Contemporary Art Gallery (2016), The Class of Glass at Passion for Glass Gallery (2017), Earth Show with Limelighter (2017) and The People’s Poetry Festival at Loft 112 (2017) in Calgary, Alberta. She is currently working in illustration, sculpture and photography, and teaches art history classes to children at Pinnovate, a Calgary based arts and crafts studio.