

3-8-2020

Fever Palm

Carol A. Alexander

Part of the English Language and Literature Commons

Follow this and additional works at / Suivez-nous ainsi que d'autres travaux et œuvres:

<https://scholars.wlu.ca/thegoose>

---

Recommended Citation / Citation recommandée

Alexander, Carol A.. "Fever Palm." The Goose, vol. 18 , no. 1 , article 16, 2020, <https://scholars.wlu.ca/thegoose/vol18/iss1/16>.

This article is brought to you for free and open access by Scholars Commons @ Laurier. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Goose by an authorized editor of Scholars Commons @ Laurier. For more information, please contact scholarscommons@wlu.ca.

Cet article vous est accessible gratuitement et en libre accès grâce à Scholars Commons @ Laurier. Le texte a été approuvé pour faire partie intégrante de la revue The Goose par un rédacteur autorisé de Scholars Commons @ Laurier. Pour de plus amples informations, contactez scholarscommons@wlu.ca.

Fever Palm

A fever palm is an ancient reckoning for bud of abscess and trembling fit. In desert that was blue lie skeins of a broken lifeline.

Candy-coloured water jugs tease the tongue with their emptiness.
Fins that Helios charred litter the southern strand.

How quickly the skin burns, how livid the scars.
There has always been thirst. Then there is a thirst that susurrates always: a dry wadi, seed grasses withering.

Come from fire into a cavern dripping moon milk,
a fantastic underworld of a limestone karst.

Once was an ocean of ponderous breadth,
midnight a silk shroud against the Inquisition's squint:
so many epochs to learn a single, shining world.

And the wine-dark sea of gods rowing to some tragic victory, the page wrinkling in a summer rain—we've lain in graves myth-made,
borrowing names against the whirling elements, have crawled over rock face mapping composite and licking our own sweat, mouthing facts at the wind.

How to live as heat's confederates, cattle seeking pasturage beyond the steel fences. We'll be beautiful horned skeletons.

Or we will live.

How small, says the noontime shadow, its tail flickering.

CAROL ALEXANDER is the author of the poetry collections Environments (Dos Madres Press, 2018) and Habitat Lost (Cave Moon Press, 2017) and the chapbook Bridal Veil Falls (Flutter Press, 2013). Alexander's work appears in a variety of anthologies and journals. She holds a PhD in American literature from Columbia University.