Hood's apartment raided; bugs flee

By I. M. Biased WLU TODAY

The tenants of 10 Ostartentious Drive woke up Monday morning to find their building had been condemned...

The board of health found the number of unrelated cockroaches living in the apartments exceeded the legal limit of 500. Residents of the building said the cockroaches were very quiet and never caused any trouble...

students who couldn't afford to eat because of the high rent.

Bratt Rickyson, Beagle Advisor at University of Waterloo, who offers legal advice sometimes, said that although the law is unfair, there is nothing they can do.

"I personally believe that as many cockroaches should be allowed to live together as possible, if they don't mind..." said Rickyson.

The building's owner is being sued for damages by the Committee to Conserve Cockroach Condos.

The owner's identity remained a mystery until late yesterday when WLU TODAY researchers successfully determined the owner of the building. The apartments are indeed managed by Berry Hood building limited. The actual building is in fact owned by Dr. Witmann in trust for a Mr. Johnston who actually works for 165534987 Canada Limited which is really Berry Hood's company.

After making this discovery, we found that Mr. Hood had actually fired himself as manager of his property, thereby releasing himself from any liability. When asked for comment, Mr. Hood said, "I have no comment about anything!"

WLU TODAY also found that Mr. Hood is actually one Adolf Heinsermann, the ex-manager for the Nazi concentration camps during World War II. He was fired from that post in 1944 because he kept the camps in such poor living condition.

Residents of 10 Ostartentious Drive are now faced with the problem of where to live. Most of them can now be seen sadly packing their Kraft macaroni & cheese and saying goodbye to their favourite cockroaches.

One resident of the building, who would only be identified as Cheryl, said, "Those little guys really grew on you after a while. Most nights I would even sleep with a few of them. We'll really miss them."

A frequent visitor to the building, Richard, said, "Mr. Hood really did everything to make those multi-legged creatures feel at home. He (Berry Hood) must be a great cockroach lover, we'll miss him too."

Walking in a weirder wonderland

By There's A K. WLU TODAY

Wonder Land University announced today that the present campus will be converted into a giant amusement park. At a press conference held in the mud pit, WLU President Dr. Jocular Weirid announced details of the multi-million dollar theme park.

"It's going to be great," he said with much enthusiasm. "It'll make the campus a fun place to be. And isn't that what university is all about?"

Tuition will be abolished, Weirid announced, and replaced by a daily admission fee of $9.99. "Students will love it," Weirid said. "They hate having to pay a big chunk of money in September. With this system, they pay as they go."

Season passes will also be available for $1,999. Turnstiles will be set up at each building and each class room door. Admission will be 75 cents for all buildings except the Peters Building which will be an even dollar.

"Business students don't like carrying too much change in their suit pockets," Weirid said.

The new amusement park theme will increase the number of students applying to WLU, but Weirid said "That's okay. We want to be able to turn down the most students in the country."

Weirid also divulged that one of the corporate sponsors is McDonald's. And to thank them for their generous support, Weirid announced that the current Dining Hall and Torque Room facilities will become giant McDonald's restaurants complete with golden arches. The revolving restaurant proposed for the present Student Union Building will be a more elegant McDonald's for those who like to shake when they have a Big Mac attack.

Changes to the campus include: an aquarium with whale and dolphin shows in the present AC to be known as Aqua Land.

swimming will still be available, but in the man-made lake which will be created on the current football field.

windsurfing, sailing and paddle boating will be some of the fun activities available at Lake Land.

Case World (Peters Building) will also be the home of the new Smurf Forest. Weirid said this is the ideal location because of the mazes that are on the second and third floors. "Those little blue critters will have lots of places to hide."

Residents will be converted into deluxe hotels — named after a famous and lovable bunch of characters — the Flintstones. "No one remembers who Euler, Willison, Conrad, and the other guys are anyway. And everyone loves the Flintstones. Conrad will become Wilma's House for Wayward Women, Euler and Leupold will become Pebbles and Bam-Bam House, Willison will become Barmie's Backyard, and Little House will become Fred's House. Not to be confused with Fred Hall, the new bar and dance hall to be built overlooking Lake Land. The new all women's hotel which is just under construction will be named Betty's Brothel.

The executive of the campus Water Buffalo Club are excited about the plans.

"It's about time they made the university as fun as our club is," the Grand PooBah stated.

The club plans to lobby for a club house in the park.

Other attractions include numerous rides, many of which will be housed in the soon to be built Arts Centre. "With the price of admission, the building will pay for itself in no time," Weirid said. Minister of Colleges and Amusements Greg "Cold Cash" Siberia was pleased with the proposed changes to the Arts Centre. In fact, he was so pleased with the quick return on the government's money, he could be seen doing cart wheels outside of Queen's Park.

Students will also benefit from the new park by obtaining jobs as tour guides, theme characters and ride operators. "The wages will be low," Weirid said, "but who needs money when you're having so much fun?"

A monorail will connect Aqua Land and Lake Land with the rest of the campus. The tunnels from Case World to Book Land (formerly the Library) and to the CTB (Central Ticket Booth) will be changed into roller skating and skate board facilities.

Parking lots will be replaced by more attractions, rides and exhibits. The monorail will also transport students, faculty and staff from parking facilities off campus to the campus. Weirid and Waterloo Mayor Christmas Carol jointly announced Waterloo Park will be the site for Wonder Land University parking.

Fledgling grads hatch evil plot

By I. M. Agrad WLU TODAY

At 8 a.m. on April 1, 1986, the Graduate Liberation Army (GLA), in a surprise bid for graduate autonomy, stormed the Student Union Building (SUB).

The GLA, a fringe revolutionary element of the Wonder Land University graduate community, has long been frustrated by what they call the "bureaucratic bourgeois bungleings of prepubescent WLU politicians." Unwilling to await the result of ongoing negotiations between WLU and the Wonder Land University Graduate Students' Association (WLU-GSA), this band of highly educated and professionally trained academics decided to take events into their own hands.

The military operation was executed swiftly and without flaw. Not counting on surprise, but rather on the fact that WLU fails to take graduate students seriously, the GLA managed to penetrate WLU central. All the executive offices were occupied before WLU members had time to finish reading the morning funnies in the GLOBE. While grumbling that their coffees were getting cold, the WLU executives were herded into WLU President Czartissimo's office where they were interrogated for all the valuable information they held. The interrogation lasted three minutes.

The GLA guerrillas held siege over the SUB for four hours. The

Pianos picket in protest

By Agent 995 WLU TODAY

The entire piano inventory of the WLU Faculty of Music is missing, says Lean Dean Grea of the Wonder Land University Faculty of Music. Foul play is definitely suspected, although some music students say some of the clavier-like instruments may have run away.

Students apparently discovered the disappearances upon going into the Alligator Arboretum to practise on March 32, 1986. Chief of Insecurity John Bald estimates the instruments have been missing since December 1, 1985.

"Perhaps they (the culprits) backed a covered wagon to the door and spirited them off," said Bald. He added that the theft was not serious, even if the pianos are never recovered.

"There must be a defect in the inventory system," said Merle Trainer, WLU Director of Impersonal Services.

"It'll only cost them about $225,000 to replace them," said Anda Beer, Assistant Executive to the Executive Assistant to the Dean, of the 50-odd pianos. "They (WLU) can take it out of the $5.4 million they're squeezing out of the government to build that milk carton they call an arts centre."

But several music students think the pianos ran away because of obscene working conditions.

"They were always crowded into little soundproof cubicles," trilled I. M. Harmonium, a 3rd year voice major, sorrowfully.

"People pounded on them," said Guy Many, a minor character with a major instrument in the faculty. "It really was tough. I heard them cry sometimes. Sometimes their bass strings popped."

It is rumoured that several of the upright pianos are currently hiding out in the Philippines. WLU TODAY spoke to one of the pianos, which was hiding in the back of Imelda Marcos' shoe closet.

"We're sick of dominants," said the Yamaha model. "We decided we had to somehow diminish the severe vibrato we're all suffering. So, here we are."

The pianos were planning on making it only a brief vacation, but say they like their freedom.

"We're not coming back," said the Yamaha. "It's great not to be subdominant anymore. Besides, they could never keep track of us anyway."

Meanwhile, back at WLU, insecurity has doubled, in spite of the fact that there is nothing left to guard.

"No one is allowed in the Arboretum ever again," said John Bald. "It's for their own protection."

Students fast for Quarters

By Sally Wayward
WLU TODAY

Last Thursday, Brat Czartosimo called a surprise meeting of the Wonder Land University Students' Union Bored of Directors to announce his plans for a hunger strike to protest the administration's antagonism toward the naming of the Quarters Circus Centre.

After a heartfelt speech in which Czartosimo urged the board to join him in a vigil outside Dr. Jocular Weir's office, members unanimously endorsed his suggestion by nodding their heads vehemently. After some discussion the group agreed they would not eat between the hours of 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. today.

"Because of the administration's blatant lack of concern for how we the student body feel, we believe we have no recourse in the situation at hand," said Czartosimo.

"I was talking about Jock's decision to bypass the political structure to achieve an end far beyond the scope of conventional techniques, last week when I had breakfast with Dave, I mean Mr. Pepperson, Premier of Ontario," said Czartosimo. "We believe that sometimes the situation demands more forceful action than the present modes available provide."

Seldom Freeloader agreed that drastic action had to be taken to force the administration to back off from its confrontational stance.

"I know it's a major sacrifice but we can do it, if we all hold together and strive towards a common goal. We're hoping to draw attention to our cause through the g'umbling of our stomachs."

Bored members will meet outside Dr. Weir's office today at noon wearing empty brown paper bags on their heads.

When asked if skipping lunch would be an effective form of protest, Czartosimo replied, "Any more than that could damage our health. What with the shortfall of funds, federal and provincial cutbacks, and the present appalling state of OSAP, most students are severely malnourished on a steady diet of macaroni and cheese, anyway. I think we can have a much stronger effect on society if we stay strong and healthy."

When former Vice-Presidential candidate, Sleeve "It's in the basket" Eves, was asked about his position on the protest, he replied, "Well, uh, I'm not too sure. I'm like most students and don't really know anything about this issue. And for the record, I didn't really mean to start that brawl at the mudwrestling match."

WLU inclined to be unbalanced

By Tawdry Flimsy
WLU TODAY

The inclining meal balance system is receiving rave reviews from WLU — at least from Wonder Land University President Dr. Jocular Weir.

This system is very complex and only the university administration can completely understand it. Apparently patrons of the Dining Hall, a haven for home cooking, eat less while they pay more money. This meal plan was organized with the students in mind.

Students are required to pay for their meals up front on pain of death.

"The students are happy to chip in and relieve the Dining Hall of its $92,000 deficit," Weir said reassuringly.

When told the students did not completely share his enthusiasm, Dr. Weir was simply not delighted. He was told of a pending student protest and was grieved those "ungrateful wretches would ruin all my good intentions." He said he has come to a new resolution. "There is a war out there; it's us against them. And I'll be damned if I let unemployed preppies in diapers get the best of us."

When asked who was winning the war, Dr. Weir stated: "Those reds are doing a fine job, but obviously since we have wrangled so much money out of them we have the economie clout, and we all know that money speaks."

Dr. Weir said he is not about to give up the system because he is "simply delighted with it." It's the most ingenious way yet the administration has of bleeding the students of their parents' hard earned money. It's incredible! This plan restores my faith in the administration. I can definitely say we are doing our job effectively."

WLU's outgoing president, Brat Czartosimo, was clearly outraged with this flagrant disregard for WLU's. "I deem it unfair that the administration should have both their hands in the students' pockets while WLU is left out in the cold with nothing to plunder and its zipper down."

President-electrocut Brain Topless stated: "It's clearly unfair." Outgoing vice-president Jiffy Cake stated: "It's clearly unfair and cruel."

Dr. Weir has formed a food service ad hoc sub-committee to allay students' fear that they are paying through the nose. In light of the students' reaction to the system Dr. Weir stated: "I would be delighted if there was a student protest, petitions and all the works, as long as I'm there when they show up." Weir added that students need to show more school spirit.

A ransom note was presented to the Administration, listing terms for the release of the undergraduate politicians. The president of the University, Dr. Jocular Weir was unavailable for comment on the demands. After hearing of the occupation, Dr. Weir had to be rushed by ambulance to KW Hospital where he is being treated for convulsive laughter.

GLA spokeswoman Shelley Slaughter presented the army's demands to WLU TODAY today:

- 1) A graduate palace (much like the Taj Mahal).
- 2) A Lear jet (to attend OPEC meetings and OFS conferences).
- 3) A 250-person jacuzzi (to enhance the sense of community among graduate students).
- 4) An extremely large dry martini (with two hundred and fifty straws).
- 5) An MA graduate pension plan (a guaranteed life-time income).

The GLA was confident that its demands would be met. When asked by reporters what their first action would be following the occupation of the SUB, GLA Propaganda Minister Mike the Impaler replied: "The GLA Provisional Government is giving serious consideration to re-naming the building as its first priority."

Grace under pressure for these ecumenical epicureans

By the Wt. Rev. Yom Dorkson WLU TODAY

Fund cutting has hit another venerable institution, the fortnightly WLU Chaplains' breakfast. Held regularly in the Pastoral Room of the Small Marten Centre, beginning promptly at 9:30 a.m., the Chaplains' Breakfast (which in recent years has slid into the Marten Luther Wake and Memorial Society Drunk Lunch), has symbolized the ecumenical flavour of Chaplainsque endeavour at WLU. Presbyterian, Lutheran, Baptist and United, Roman Catholic and Christian Reformed chaplains meet for breakfast, eat together, break for rest breaks, convene again for lunch and eat some more.

"For years," says Saul Slosed, Corvener of the Chaplains and Chair of the MLW&MS Drunk Lunch, "our two societies have harmonized and had great fellowship together. Mainly we eat together, but we do other things, too. Now this happens. It's a shame."

The problem leading to the cut in funds began when the dumb waiter, which services the Floral Room from the cafeteria kitchen just below, broke while carrying a Chaplain's Breakfast up from the kitchen. The dumb waiter declined comment.

"It was just too much for it," says head chef Veritable Smorghastorben. "The machine's load level is one ton, give or take a few pounds. It was okay until the new United Church guy came on board. It was always right on the limit, right on a ton. Now it's a hundred pounds over. It was just too much."

The Chaplains have been notified — by Chancellor Harvester herself, whom they have invited to their next breakfast — the cut in funding should not be taken personally. "Fund cuts are across the boards," the Chancellor was quoted as saying. "I like to eat as well as the next opera singer, but these chaplains, well... there's a limit to what human flesh can endure."

Ordure too. John Bald, director of maintenance and insecurity, when interviewed by WLU TODAY, said: "You should see the men's johns during the rest breaks. Unbelievable! And these guys call themselves... no doubt about it, they can eat!"

The chaplains, for the most part, have accepted with sadness, but non-violently, the administration's decision to cut their food allocation to what might be considered in other quarters a lumberjack's breakfast. The Martin Luther Wake and Memorial Society — whose membership is identical with the Chaplains' Breakfast group — have resigned themselves to receive in future a no-frills businessman's lunch. Both events, from now on, will be strictly BYOL.

Hamster terrorists attack

By Sally Wayward WLU TODAY

Five Terrorists, armed with tasteless records, took WLU Cancellor Fluorine Harvester hostage in a breathtaking display of daring-do last night. The terrorists, who masked their identities by wearing frosh boxer shorts on their heads, are demanding the replacement of the Golden Hawk, the present official symbol of Wonder Land University, with Rambo Hamster.

"We don't feel that weedy, scrawny bird is a symbol of the rebellious, non-conformist zeal that burns in the hearts of Laurier students," said the masked editor of WLU TODAY, twiddling the earring in his left ear. The editor who asked to remain nameless added, "Rambo Hamster epitomizes the revolutionary spirit lurking beneath the apparent apathy of Wonder Land University."

The terrorists have appropriated the WLU SOG offices and are playing "All the Girls I've Loved Before" by Willie Nelson and Luciano Pavarotti, "You're Having My Baby" by Paul Anka and "Like a Virgin" by Madonna continuously until their demands are met.

Fluorine Harvester is reported to be pleading for respite from the barbarous atrocities, and faints periodically.

UNMASKED DESPERADO: A Rambo Hamster terrorist agreed to remove his mask for a pic, on the condition that WLU TODAY not reveal his name.

One of the terrorists is demanding a chiropractor at Health Services in addition to the institution of Rambo Hamster.

"The two issues are compatible in some vague way..." he trailed off. When asked why he joined the hit squad, he replied, "I dunno. I had this urge, you see..."

"It's about time students started to show some guts and stand up to the administration. It's great to see some spirit in students. I don't like brown-nosed administrative toadies," said a certain overgrown student who has been at Wonder Land University for 23 years. "But don't quote me on that."

Another of the group was reluctant to speak to the WLU TODAY reporter. He agreed to speak to WLU TODAY on the condition that the KW Record would not scoop the student paper. He phoned from Toronto to say he was sorry he couldn't be there.

"Nuke it, nuke it all. See if I care," he was heard to mutter into his mustache. He was the only one of the group to confess to having a silly nickname.

"Hey, Sally baby," the final terrorist greeted this reporter. "This is like a mega drag, man." He expressed regret at the drastic tactics they had to use, but explained why he preferred the popular comic-strip hero to the former symbol of Wonder Land University. "Rambo hamster is boss. The bird is the worst, ever."

All the desperados said they hoped for a quick resolution to the hostage-taking, and that WLU SOG and the administration would let the outmoded symbol of bygone days die a well-deserved death.

The Fine Arts Faculty at University of Uknowwho almost came to blows yesterday over the controversial issue of naming the newly constructed Arts building. One prof suggested his own name. Another prof objected. The first prof objected to the objection and discussion soon lost any semblance of objectionable objectivity. The object in question was a puke-green sign bearing the first prof's name.

Armed with only his trusty screwdriver (nicknamed "Ex-

With frothing spittle drenching his goatee the first prof viciously asserted that prof no. 2 "wouldn't know an oxymoronic trope if it recapitulated your phylogeny and alliterated all over your suede loafers and elbow patches, you bitch!" DIGGING FOR GOLD: Two industrious vagrants picked up shovels yesterday and joined in the search for $8 million in gold rumoured to be buried on campus. This was, in reality, an ingenious hoax to have the foundations of Fred Hall excavated at minimum expense to Wonder Land University.

Increased bar area and decreased physical stress on the Student Union Building have led to the construction of Wonder Land University's latest building. Ground-breaking ceremonies attended by WLU President Jocular Weird and Internal Revenue Council (IRC) chair Danged Right, were held yesterday.

During the ceremony, President Weird expressed his delight with the new building. "I'm hopelessly just delighted," he said. The twelve-story building is to be built on the southeast corner of the football field. To allow the lavish top-floor bar to be competitive with facilities at the University of Waterloo, it will be named Fred Hall (so U of W students, confused at the best of times, will mistake it for their own Fed Hall).

"It's a major coup," said Wonder Land University Students' and Others' Organization (WLU-SOO) President Brat Czartosimo. "Speaking on behalf of myself and OFS I think it is a major step in the right direction towards a new attitude towards student buildings." Czartosimo is election chair of OFS (Organization of Fascist Students).

Referring to the ownership and operations of the building, he said, "The building will be owned by the students, but operated by the university. The right to name the building was given to the students by the university's Bored Governors, in view of the previously established ownership situation." The students, through a Naming Review Task Force (NRTF) chaired by WLU SOO ex-director Ono Lice, chose the name Fred Hall in honour of long-time Dean of Students Fred Quarters.

According to WLU's legal advisor, Veg Drains, the building will be managed under an Operating Procedures Agreement which states that all operating costs, staffing and licensing arrangements will be the direct responsibility of the university. The university will also collect all revenues.

WLU's Director of Psychic Plant and Procrastination, Restless Robinson, stated that the Turret could no longer be used as a dance pub, due to stresses on the floor. "Dancing, especially slam dancing, should be forbidden," he explained. "Otherwise, the floor could crash down within a few days."

"The Turret is going to be converted into a revolving restaurant," said master architect Gone Linglego. "This will rotate the stress evenly over the whole build-

Dean today, Don tomorrow?

By Red Sailor WLU TODAY

In an unprecedented move Wonder Land University Dean of Students, Dean Fred Quarters, has changed his name to "Student Union" in order to clear his name from the current controversy on campus.

Last night Dean Quarters replaced the name plate on his desk with one bearing the title "Student Union - Dean of Students."

"I wanted to end the big fuss on campus," he said. "I felt changing my name was in the best interest of all concerned."

The old name plate is in Wontson Hall for the time being.

Residents of A2 Wontson had predicted the Dean's move. They figured Dean Quarters wouldn't need his old name much longer so they arranged to buy it for their lounge.

Brat Czartosimo, president of Wonder Land University Students' Union, said it was uncharacteristic of Student Union (formerly Dean Quarters) to become involved in the name game.

"He was aware of the Students' Union's willingness to purchase his name and also Dr. Weird's position on the issue," said Czartosimo. "If he sold his name plate, he should have dealt with the Students' Union. I personally would have been interested."

WLU's lawyer said Student Union's (formerly Dean Quarters) decision to change his name contravenes the trust relationship that exists between the individual and the provincial government through the Ontario Personal Acknowledgement Act. The OPAA states that proper procedure for changing names must be followed. The Dean's move is legal only if the Students' Union agrees to immediately change the name of the Quarters Campus Centre to the Student Union Building in honour of Dean Union (formerly Dean Quarters).

New party caters to outcasts

By Merdinand Farcos WLU TODAY

A new campus political party has started at Wonder Land University.

The party will be known as the Peace-Pipe Party and the campaign slogan will read, "Come smoke the peace-pipe with us," according to the new party's founding president Bys Lunatic.

"Membership will be open to left-wing liberals, left-handed right wingers, centres who wish they could play left wing instead of skating all over the ice, following plays into the corner, and standing out in front of the net when they know they shouldn't be, people who hate government rhetoric, satirical radicals, radical satiricists and raving lunatics," according to Lunatic.

"In general the party is anti-Reagan. Though we may be crazy, we are not so crazy as to believe in his ludicrous defence policy," said Lunatic.

Floundering party vice-president I. M. Luny outlined the party's principles in an exclusive WLU TODAY interview late last night.

"We are strong advocates of pollution elimination — not control; we don't believe in pollution control. Control is a word that allows politicians and company owners to deceive, to hide the truth, and to basically lie to the public and get away with it," said Luny.

"Instead we will try to eliminate pollution to the best of human technology," he added.

"The peace-pipers will fight to eliminate irrational government spending, retarded government games especially those proceeding in the House of Commons," stated Lunatic.

The Peace-Pipe Party Constitution states the party is concerned with all issues that jeopardize the well-being of the common people, the earth (including all three worlds), vegetation and animal life.

Opponents and founders of the party agree that the Peace-Pipe Party is an insane response led by slightly insane people trying to make this even more insane world a little less loony.

The Debate: TURRET

Today's debate includes our opinion that the Turret should turn down its music so that our office floors do not vibrate, plus less biased views by students, more biased views by Turret staff, views of the city seen from the Turret window, and voices from across the campus.

Turret brainwashing scam uncovered

We are being manipulated. We are mere pawns in a complicated chess game far beyond our most wild imaginations. For while we drink and dance in the orgasmic miasma we call the Turret, we are blissfully unaware of circumstances that will change our lives forever. Scambored DJs are part of the most elaborate and ingenious hoax ever perpetrated on Wonder Land students. They lull us into a twilight zone of apathy and complacency.

Scambored DJs are, in fact, undercover agents for WLUSOO and the administration. The two have cooperated for once on an underhanded deal to swindle students of their god-given right to worry, gripe, and protest. Instead of biting our nails, chanting and swaying in unison or setting ourselves on fire, we turn to the Turret and alcohol for comfort from a world spinning out of control. And it's all a plot to keep our minds off real things.

For example, how many students are aware of the administration's free trade agreement with the States? Last week Dr. Weird was seen wrapped in a cloak of secrecy, heading to Washington. There he met in a joint trade summit with Ronald Reagan where the two discussed latest developments in the heady world of high defense and tight-fisted finance. Menacing plans are afoot to install Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles in the foundations of Bouckaert Hall in return for sending ten of WLU's most promising biz nobs to the States to save the country from its financial quagmire. Did WLU students know or care about this latest alarming development? No way — latent radicals were getting pissed in the Turret and puking on their penny loafers.

And what are students doing about the blatant repression of free speech on the computer system? Concerned students are not taking to the streets to protest the fact that typing a dirty word on CP6 can result in a nasty letter, suspension of "computer privileges" or, if the words are particularly offensive, expulsion from school. Neither did they march in support of the poor sod who was forced to type "I will not curse, swear or otherwise insult the intelligence of CP6 as long as we both shall live" 1000 times. Instead potentially socially conscious students were slumming in the last bastion of craven immorality, expressing a dark primordial urge to maim and crush human body parts.

And what about inequities in the Student Union Building? Do students care that while WLUSOO basks in the relative comfort of carpeted floors, surrounded by breathtakingly original prints, the over-worked, underpaid staff of WLU TODAY fall off ripped chairs and stare at putrid stale walls? No. Instead they are lured to the Turret, where glasses are shattered on the beer-drenched floor at regular intervals.

And what is so distressing is that it was all planned, we were meant to become a bunch of mindless wimps! Scambored DJs use backward masking, and other secret agents slip intoxicating liquids into our drinks. We are doomed to lose.....

If you listen carefully to Turret music, you can hear the messages programmed to seduce our subconsciouses with irresistible subtlety, like a deadly lullaby. Phrases like "Throw beer bottles," "Sit on your neighbour," and "Support Pretoria — buy Calling O' Thief beer" bombard our vulnerable psyches.

And alcohol! Why only last Thursday I went into that place stone-cold sober, and after only three double rum and cokes was madly wildly flagrantly inebriated! The fact that such a mild-mannered reporter as I could be so misled is an indication of the power Scambored and other undercover agents wield over us unsuspecting students.

So we have to fight this brainwashing with all our might. Let's once again raise our sweet young voices in a sentimental chorus of cholet! Armed rebellion can be fun, if only you know how!

ONE LINE ON THE NEWS

A former Turret staff member says that the Turret beer is usually delivered on Tuesday except last year when the strike was on and then it wasn't delivered at all.

Anyone else could have told you that.

Wondering in Wonder Land

Well, Red, it sure has been a long year. I am sitting in the Scambored office watching the ceiling vibrate from the packed dance floor upstairs. It's funny because no matter how many letters are written to WLU TODAY about how bad our musical taste is, the ceiling in the office always shakes Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. I guess those who dance, all 500 of them, are just putting up with things and aren't really having a great time. If they are having a terrible time listening to our terrible music then why do I have to dust the dust from the ceiling tiles off my desk in the morning? Why, Red, why? This brings me to a couple of questions I have been meaning to ask you in the hope I will gain answers from your vast wisdom:

— why do people buy ceramic fire dogs on Wheel of Fortune?
— why do people dress like cadavers then go to the Turret and wonder why they have to dance alone?
— why hasn't the entire Students' Union Building disintegrated, because we haven't named it yet, like Brat said it would!

— why do people still wear those yes buttons when they only wear their carnations for an afternoon during frosh week?
— why do people pretend they are upset when someone dies and say they knew that person when they aren't and they don't?

Heavy Cellist is a Scambored worker who frequently plays Nana Mousse Curry in the Turret.

— why don't we have an elevator in the Students' Union Building?
— why the fuck is Niki Newman such an airhead?
— do Biz nobs really keep brown bag lunches in their brief cases?
— what do they ship styrofoam in?

— which lane is the fast one and how do people live in it with all those fancy Italian sports cars on the road?
Well, I guess I had better get back upstairs. This office is once again getting cloudy with ceiling tile dust.

Ashes to ashes, dust to dust

They asked me how I knew... Turret dust was blue... and I replied, "Cause it's in my eyes... dust gets in your eyes."

I should know. My desk is in an office. Underneath the Turret. My office ceiling clicks against my office doorframe on Turret nights. Leave, you say? I can't. Someone has to keep the world informed.

That's because everyone else is dancing as fast as they can on my head.

This is what happens when the floor moves:

A) Everything clicks down here, in negative ways.

B) The floor of the Turret gets weaker. Structural engineers say it could go in the next ten seconds or the next ten years, whichever comes first.

C) Dust gets in my contact lenses. So, I'm losing contact. I'm out of sight with reality.

If the Turret floor collapses, this is what will happen:

A) The WLU TODAY offices will be buried. Actually, the Scambored DJ's have been planning this information catastrophe since people started writing letters to the editor about how much they don't like different stuff. Myself, I think the music's ok. All I can hear down here are the floor beams rattling. That must mean lots of bass.

B) The WLUSOO offices will survive unscathed. All the hot air from all those self-righteous infant shit-disturbers will hold up their two tons of flooring.

C) The Turret will have to be rebuilt. This means it will need renaming. The administration will step in, take over, and turn it into a pentecostal revival church. Hallelujah!

D) No one will know the Turret has been destroyed because the WLU TODAY offices won't exist to tell them.

I'm glad the Turret is being turned into a revolving restaurant. Maybe they'll serve real neat food like Frank 'n' Stuffs, those new chili-stuffed hotdogs. Draft beer, and Taquitos. A real class joint.

Jim Morrison

WLU TODAY columnist

Morrison alive, says Turret is unreal

PARIS — Okay, man, there's just one thing I want to get straight from the start, man. I don't know where this Turret place is, and I really don't care, man. The Doors never got booked to play any place called the Turret, so anybody who gives a flying (expletive deleted) about such a smallminded, provincial place isn't worth a flying (expletive deleted) himself.

I hear they don't even play the Doors, man, or at least not nearly often enough, man. I hear there's some sort of (censored) controversy over subliminal Devil-worship messages in the stuff they do play, though. What a (censored) crock of (unprintable), man. Everybody knows all that backward-masking (censored) doesn't work worth (expletive deleted). We tried putting messages on "The Soft Parade," but it all (censored) up, man. Ray Manzarek said "Hold your breath 'til you turn blue," and Robby Krieger said "Look at my shoes," and I said "Go play in traffic, you little (unprintable) creeps," and what do you think everybody did, man? Sweet (expletive deleted) all that's what, man. Except, for some reason, the part about the shoes. Maybe that was because we put that one on forwards instead of backwards, man. I don't (censored) know, man.

But, at any rate, man, I think it's (censored) well about time somebody put some good honest-to-God Devil-worship lyrics into the steady stream of (unprintable) schlocky middle-of-the-road (expletive deleted) that we're forced to listen to on the radio, in bars, and especially in (censored) shopping malls, which is about the only place that (two expletives deleted) belongs, along with all the squareheaded preppy little balls of festering pus and (an obscene expression that defies description) that listen to it belong.

No, come to think of it, all those little argyle-swaddled fetters should all be locked up in a dark (censored) room and beset by rabid vampire bats. I mean, anybody that actually admits to ever of his own volition having listened to Corey Hart deserves no better, and probably a whole (censored) lot worse. Why can't anybody play any decent music nowadays? Did the entire (expletive deleted) world go and have a massive (obscenity) lobotomy while I was away, man?

I hear even the (censored) Jefferson Airplane (which wasn't even that good a band at their best, man — they couldn't hold a candle to the Doors, man, and besides, Grace Slick is, was, and always will be a bitch) have changed their (censored) name seventeen (censored) times and are now playing (unprintable) Top-40 bubblegum (expletive deleted), man. It makes me want to (censored) vomit, man.

And another thing, I'm (censored) sick and tired of people saying I'm dead, man. Can't a guy take a (expletive deleted) extended vacation without everybody and his (censored) dog going off half-cooked? I mean, did any of you actually SEE me die? Have any of you actually found my moldering body rotting beneath the earth? NO? Then why don't you all (stream of obscene invectives beyond belief)!

The fine art of seduction

It's that time of year again. Exams, tests, essays, what a major drag. Time to lighten up Wonder Land University students! There is a place for us. Upstairs in the Turret where you can escape from humdrum student life. Come to the throbbing heart of Wonder Land's nightlife.

This is specifically aimed at female students on campus who are searching for that special someone for a meaningful relationship. The Turret is an ideal place to find a man. But how to attract a man...?

Clothes
■ lose the plaids, business-like suits, shirts buttoned up to the neck. Don't mix business with pleasure. Wonder Land men like women who look like they know how to have fun, relax, and go wild in small quantities.

■ don't bother wearing dog collars, spiked magenta hair or ripped fish net nylons. The kind of guys you'd attract in this get-up couldn't perform even if they wanted to.

■ forget about Black Sabbath t-shirts, Ozzy Osbourne, and other musicians to weld by, unless you're into bondage or masochism. Head-banger guys consider sex on par with working out with a punching bag. If you're into pleasure, leave rocker shirts at home.

■ stick to soft, feminine clothes with a touch of vampish style — men like their women to be part saint, part whore (ask Robertson Davies).

Conversation
■ always remember that flattery will get you everywhere.

Once you've decided on the man you want, find things about his clothes, looks, or masculine smell to sincerely compliment him on. Men like to have their egos stroked.

■ it's always a good idea to draw the man's attention to sex, in subtle ways. Very light nuances in a conversation let him know that you're not devoid of passion, and find're attractive.

■ light brushes against the sleeve are usually effective. For a more dramatic effect, fall against him on the dance floor.

■ when slam-dancing, do not smash into the man so hard he flies across the dance floor. Men's egos are easily bruised and they do not like it if a woman hurts them.

Definitely don't...
■ puke. This gives you bad breath, and can be a definite hindrance to romance. Also you come across as a wimp because you can't hold your liquor.

Try not to...
■ be drunker than the man you're sweet on. This way, he can tell you his whole life story while you listen in wide-eyed wonder. Later, after his girlfriend dumps him, he'll come running to you because he will think you're the only woman who understands him.

If you want a serious relationship

■ definitely don't move in, call him all the time, or be a general nuisance. They'll think you're just a kid in puppy love, and shun you. If they show no interest after a few subtle attempts to get their attention, forget them... they obviously have no taste.

Somewhere over the rainbow

Seeking pianos

By Tawdry Filmsy
WLU TODAY

WLU Insecurity Chief John Bald is simply mortified at the theft of the pianos from the TA under the nose of the unsuspecting noses of these alert, dedicated, upright, and sometimes upright, insecurity officers.

This theft threw a wrench into the plans of these officers for a nice quiet academic year, now they will have to work overtime. "We were even planning a liquidation party," Bald sniffed sadly. It's obviously a touchy situation now — and the insecurity force is putting its elbows to the grindstone to "lynch the little shit-disturber," according to one haggard officer. They are staying up until all hours of the day, missing needed sleep, to keep an eye on the situation and their finger on the pulse of the campus.

Later they plan to move their work outside the confines of the office, "providing the weather holds up of course," chimed in one alert officer, who was home on vacation when the pianos were stolen. They plan to start a thorough search of the campus soon.

"We are putting our all into it, as are the Waterloo Regional cops, the OPP and the RCMP, in order to locate these music boxes," said Bald.

They are right on top of things commented another observant officer, who predicted the whole mystery will be cleared up in no time at all — another six to eight years at the most.

Merle Trainer, Wonder Land University director of Impersonal Services, was not pleased. "What kind of incompetent, eh, eh, ninjas run this place?" he asked sadly after furtively searching for a word in his Hand Handbook of Epithets to express his dissatisfaction. "Why don't they hire guard dogs. The fire station does it, and you don't hear them complaining that their big red toys get stolen."

In the interim, the Salvation Army graciously donated a few historical relics from the past to be placed at the students' disposal. Everyone seems content with the new additions to the Yamaha family.

"It makes noise," one student commented dubiously. She was obviously thrilled with the new pianos.

In order to raise the money to buy new pianos, the music students are planning a strip-a-sing-drink-a-long contest. They have condescendingly allowed the other faculties to join in this serious event — mainly to expose all the spare tires rolling around campus.

Revolting soap addicts riot

By Chick N. Winger
WLU TODAY

Last week this reporter's alter ego, Mr. UT&T the Second, was sitting in his office pondering such deep and meaningful ponderings as just who the h-ll this Lafferty guy is, why everyone wants his circle put on overheads and whether or not the REAL Achieve Management Team will ever stand up; when I heard what sounded something like the death call of two thousand Australian pythons. Being an ace-type reporter, I quickly grabbed my trusty computer terminal and several miles of extension cord and rushed towards the source of the sound to cover the event for my faithful reader (namely my mom). After a breathless dash, I promptly arrived at the tv lounge just in time to witness history in the making.

It seems that the sound I heard was not two thousand dying pythons but rather two thousand Y&R fans going into shock at the realization that some foolhardy person would actually dare to try and take away the tv in the middle of their favorite soap. You might ask who would do such a dastardly deed and I might answer that that is a good question but since I refuse to get into such inane conversations I'll just tell you that it was none other than Brain Topless and leave it at that.

This reporter has learned that, in his exuberance to try and solve the office space crunch at WLU, our prez-elect decided to convert the tv lounge into a new exec dining lounge and so ordered the tv et al removed. Needless to say, the Y&R's were shocked and angry. In fact, they were so angry that with just a little coercion from your favorite reporter (who needed a really good story for this week's edition and can recognize an opportunity when he sees one) they promptly formed a semi-organized mob and ded to march on the WLU offices, screaming such catchy slogans as "We're Young and really restless!" and "We're heeere!" as they went. It was a sight to turn a reporter's thoughts to visions of a Pulitzer Prize and maybe a front page byline even!

The mob quickly demolished the WLU offices and headed out for better and bigger targets, leaving a stunned Brain to ask himself whether or not this meant his people didn't love him any-

Not wanting to miss the action, yours truly nonetheless took time out to toss Brain a daisy so that he could find the answer to that question before turning to follow the crowd. He watched them destroy the BACCHUS office and then head towards Scambored. Here the group felt its first resistance. Scambored, in an effort to save their last refuge from creditors, were merciless. They quickly turned the enraged crowd from their doorstep by bombarding them with old Village Person tunes, thus inflicting heavy casualties. The horde, realizing they couldn't fight this kind of tactics without the aid of mustard gas, prudently decided to turn to easier prey.

By this time the mob was starting to die out. Some attributed this to the fact that they found out the campus insecurity force was on the way, but I think it was more likely due to the fact that the commercials were over.

A few hearty souls pressed on however and moved on to the next door in the hallway. Here is where the greatest tragedy of the whole incident occurred, for behind that door were the CORD offices. Remember how it felt to find out that there was no Santa Claus? (You didn't know that there wasn't a Santa Claus? Damn! Well, imagine how you feel right now after just finding out that there isn't a Santa.) Multiply that by two point four and you'll know how these poor suckers felt when they opened that door and found out once and for all that the CORD isn't made by elves during their spare time left over from cookie making. The weaker among them fainted while the rest just stood there weeping openly. The loss of innocence is always painful.

And so ended the great Y&R crusade. In the aftermath, there were a few good results: the CORD staff decided that the price of involvement was just too high for the average student to pay and voted to encourage apathy from now on, and one enterprising student from The School of Business had the bright idea to name the results of the mob's destruction "experimental art" and made a fortune charging people to see it. Thanks Brain, I'll think of you every time I drive my new Porsche.

Scambored reaps where it sows not

By Chick N. Winger
WLU TODAY

Wonder Land University has been the victim of another theft. While the university's insecurity force continued to struggle with the disappearance of several pianos from the Alligator Arboretum last month, an intrepid individual or group of individuals snuck into the offices of Wonder Land University Student Propaganda (WLUSP) and stole their acronym.

Student Propaganda's newly-elected president Dr. No responded to the theft:

"It's a shame that someone would want to do something like this to such a boss group of people. It's a real drag. However, in keeping with my radioactive policy, I'm going to assume the insecurity force will be unable to find it (the acronym) and it's lost for good. But it's a good thing — mega. Since saying Wonder Land University Student Propaganda is too much of a mouthful, I'm going to rename the corporation — without anybody's permission of course... how does Dr. No's Publishing Company sound to you, Cal?" WLUUSO president-electrocuted

Brain Topless commented on the theft:

"It makes one wonder what kind of a neighbourhood one's moved into doesn't it?"

He also said he would be willing to sell Student Propaganda a new name at a very good rate.

"We've got loads of them left from when we tried to rename this building," said Topless.

John Bald, WLU's Insecurity Chief is hot on the trail of the perpetrator(s). After interviewing half of the student population with his standard question of "Where were you?", he said he had come up with a few leads and a lot of good prospects for dates.

"I've come up with a few leads and a lot of good prospects for dates," said Bald. Bald said he's convinced he will eventually find out "who done it" even if he has to spend the rest of his life in Wilf's looking for clues.

In the meantime, Bald plans to take extra steps to make sure Scambored's recently acquired acronym of WLUSP (Wonder Land University Silly Productions) will not suffer the same fate.

ing, and partial collapse can be held off for at least two years."

WLUUSO's former Cheap Electrical Officer, Boppin Safari, stated the conversion met with her approval despite allegations of wrongdoing in the much-talked-about Turret/revolving restaurant renovation referendum held late last weekend. Safari's resignation in itself was controversial.

"Revolving restaurant renovation referendum resignations require ratification. Regulations regarding referenda remain regardless," responded Czartosimo.

The only loss suffered as a result of the construction will be some area of the football practice field. "No problem," said WLU athletic director and head water boy Britch Lowbrough. "Our guys can just practice around it. It will be great for blocking practice."

When asked how this would affect the WLU Bald Eagles' kicking game, Lowbrough pointed out the building provides an ideal practice target. "Since we lost Sleeve Plainly to the Windsor Glanders this year, Loose Gerit-olson will be resuming his kicking duties, and let me tell you, he needs all the help he can get. Practicing kicking over a twelve-story building is just what he needs."

The controversy was finally resolved when an anonymous suggestion evolved into an unanimous decision: the new building's name is now the Everette Maddox Arts Lecture Hall. MONEYLINE

A QUICK READ ON THE BUCKS THAT MAKE YOUR DAY

BIRD BUCKS: Sources say new currency soon to be flown out in abundant quantities mysteriously disappeared from the Canadian Mint. Witnesses reported migration in the remote north where an overflow of previously deserted nests have been inhabited and continue to flourish.

WHINING HALL RIP-OFFS: Due to the financial scroungers who plot campaigns against poor students, Whining Hall prices for each item have risen to $1.00 over the previously gracious 70 cents. Cheapest popsicles ever — $1.00.

SLUSH FUND: A secret accumulation of 8 million dollars in the WLU budget is causing serious problems for economic advisors. Invest in a computerized dating service or intercontinental ballistic missiles concealed in the basement of the supposedly new residence? Decision not to be made public until after both programs have been initiated.

OSAP (Overachievers Sums Allotment Program): After reassessing applications from under-funded students, grants will be awarded to students who achieve a GPA of 1 in all areas of study, consistently miss classes due to chronic hang-overs and threaten professors with the wrath of the Easter Bunny if assignments aren't returned in 24 hours. Grant will be a lump sum of $5,000 to do with as they wish.

TEXT BOOK COST CUTS: Snoop Purloin demonstrates his acumen when revolting against the preposterous manner in which the WLU Book Shop determines current prices. The scam is disclosed. It seems the money supposedly collected for exchange is illegally funding a drug ring which will establish an inexpensive yet spirited association to entertain the already non-productive parliament.

TEST TUBE BABIES: Population Growth Agencies announce method of conception. At the Turret, for $2.05, you will receive a vacuum-packed egglet submerged in a shooter. This innovation will reduce the burden on the WOMAN OF THE 80s by allowing the male population to experience motherhood.

Hostages taken in Weird insurrection

By John Roots
Special to WLU TODAY

WLU President Dr. Jocular Weird led a ferocious group of economists yesterday as they attempted to take over the entire Frank C. Peters building and effectively ban all business students from its corridors. Weird, himself a member of the economics faculty, held a brief news conference after the ordeal ended just before he was led away in shackles and leg irons.

Weird shocked the press by admitting the plan was originally conceived more than 15 months ago by his co-conspirators in an attempt to draw recognition to the faculty. Weird vetoed the plan at the time saying it could cause a "distraction." However, pressure was put on Weird by certain faculty members he introduced only as Mad Max, Dr. Terri-ble and Captain Billy. The situation finally boiled over when Weird received a request for an additional 25 overhead projectors.

The four men put on their Economics Association (Gord Chong—President) sweatshirts and stormed into P1025/27 hijacking a Business 121 class and holding over 200 students hostage. Big Mac, the professor involved, was quite amused and told his class, "I have never been more entertained. This class definitely wins the most entertaining class of the year award." Big Mac, realizing that it was no hoax, promptly fainted.

Almost one hour went by before university insecurity was alerted by a peeved business professor who wanted to begin a lecture in P1025 only to find the door locked and the room filled with students with their arms in the air.

WLU Insecurity Chief John Bald said they were reluctant to use force since they suffered humiliating defeat at the last hockey game against York. Instead they called in another economist to persuade the terrorists to surrender. The economist joined the rebels, telling the business director to "pretend the situation is a case. I'm sure you can solve it." Adding

WLU sees a hint of mint

By Feather McMoney
WLU TODAY

Construction began as scheduled last Tuesday on the Wonder Land University Mint. Bowling Ball Company, the Mint's contractors, are pleased with the initial progress.

"We dug three holes today and moved two piles of dirt," said Bob "Hard Hat" Carpenter, the worksite foreman. "The building should be completed on time in 1998."

The WLU Mint, dubbed the "Wonder Money Maker", is being built in what used to be a parking lot off University Avenue in front of the Dining Hall. This location was chosen because it is overlooked by the office of Dr. Jocular Weird, WLU president.

"It (the Mint) makes sense," claimed Weird. "This way not only will the university make more money, but it will have greater financial control. We'll know exactly where the students spend their money. I'm delighted with the opportunity."

The Mint was the brainchild of the Aluminum Association made up of former WLU students, mostly business graduates, who think they know everything because they have jobs. I am The-greatest, Aluminum spokesperson, explained in a press release that "by making its own money the university will be even more isolated from the community."

In an interview with WLU TODAY, The-greatest said "Face it. Nobody wants irresponsible students running around town. With WLU money that can be spent only on campus, we can save Waterloo a lot of trouble."

Although a formal announcement has not been released as to the design of the new coins and paper money, reliable sources reveal the coins will be made of tin foil and impressed with the image of Will Fred Lower, Eh?, WLU's hero and former Canadian Primed Munster. The paper money will feature campus scenes with trees.

New books

By I. No Itall
WLU TODAY

WEE-BURR ST, Wloo — You've heard of gas wars, beer wars, star wars, even first world wars. Next it's textbook wars.

Students can expect a wave of new textbooks covering every subject from "A" essays to how to bribe a prof, experts at the Makeback Textbook Manufacturers (MTM), Waterloo outlet, say.

The reason: an increase in paper production — more trees being cut down and ground into pulp — will result in a surplus of available paper.

"Nobody reads books these days unless they have to," says Lets Makeback, chair of MTM. "There's a healthy market for textbooks these days, especially with an increase in university enrollment."

Makeback, who has written four textbooks, including the recently released "The Role of Traffic Lights in Canadian Society", predicts this will result in students being required to buy more textbooks.

Books about how to sharpen pencil crayons will be required for geography students.

Business students will have to purchase books instructing them on how to recognize the quality of briefcases.

Canter pollsters today released the latest results of a series of polls commissioned by Wonder Land University.

According to the Canter poll, only 2% of Wonder Business graduates have jobs with any semblance of responsibility. In fact, Wonder Biz grads are the least desirable of graduates from any school of business in Canada.

Wess Torn University grads are the most likely to be hired by successful businesses. 98% of business people polled listed Wess Torn grads as their first choice. Only 0.6% want WLU grads first.

Dr. Jocular Weird, president of Wonder Land University, announced yesterday during his supper address to the Young Campus Communists (YCC) that WLU will not divest any of its funds.

According to statistics released after dessert, Wonder Land U., which runs an annual profit of $345 billion, has invested 4/5ths of that figure in companies and agencies which reflect no social, political, or racial partisanship.

The largest single investment is with Canadian National Mineral Water, Inc. (CNMW), which received a reported $158.9 billion from Wonder Land last year. Weird stated CNMW enjoyed a PARAMUTEAL CLUB: Wonder Land's Letterperson's Club Vice-President Looey Syko and four others have been charged with misappropriation of funds last week. It is alleged VP Syko, in combination with assorted club members, spent 85 percent of the club's budget (about $3,000) at Greenwood race track during a three day binge last week. Said Syko, "We only lost $30 in bets but the bar tab really killed us."

SHE'S A HE: A report just released in the National Enquirer proves beyond any reasonable doubt tennis star Martina Navratilova is, as has been rumoured for quite some time, actually a man. Yes it is true, Navratilova is actually Glen Mitchibata in drag.

A TALL TALE: While jumping for a defensive rebound seven-foot giant Minute Boy of the Washington Warheads lost his head in the rafters of the Louisiana Superdome. Stadium officials hope to find Boy's head before he notices it is missing.

BOWLING VIOLENCE: One fan was stabbed, at least 28 persons were arrested and a homemade bomb exploded with no injuries during weekend bowling violence in Bedrock, Michigan, police said. Spokesperson Patty O'Furniture said police arrested three senior citizens on suspicion of involvement in the stabbing.

BIRTH ON ICE: Hershey Square defenceman Moose Dupont gave birth to a 12-pound baby boy during a game against the Springfield Redskins last night. "We didn't even know he was pregnant," said defence partner Lyle Azado.

OILERS HURTING: The Edmonton Oilers' hopes of capturing their third consecutive Stanley Cup just about ended last week when Vain Petxky, Marked Mess, Jerry Karree, and Peter Tea went touring in Pelle Lindberg's Porsche. It is expected coach, president, general manager, and stick boy Slippery Slither will call up Paul Newman and the Hansen brothers to pick up the slack in penalty minutes.

TEST MIX-UP: Testing of WLU's track and field team for steroid use has been delayed because of a mix-up between the school's athletic department and the laboratory scheduled to perform the tests. Athletic director Britch Lowbrough said, "I thought they were going to bring the bottles."

MCMAHON DISAPPEARS: Chicago Bear quarterback Jim McMahon has been missing for seven days. A note was found claiming he would be found in a refrigerator. William Perry is being held for questioning.

VALUABLE ADDITION: Hall of Fame defenceman Earl Seibert was added to the Buffalo Sabre roster yesterday. "I know he hasn't been on skates for a while (35 years), but we feel that with his experience he should be able to step right into the line-up," said Sabre head honcho Scott Bowtie.

IT'S A KNOCKOUT: Canadian Willie DumbWitt knocked out the Heavyweight Champion of Albania in El Paso last night. A right cross and a left uppercut knocked Albanian Eipi Smorgan out of his wheelchair and to the canvas late in the fifth round. DumbWitt's next fight will be against Jock Hebert in Ottawa early next week.

NASL REVISTED: For the twelfth time this week a plan has been proposed to reinstate a revised edition of the North American Soccer League. This latest plan calls for games to be played in the winter so they will not conflict with the baseball and football seasons. Games will be played in ski resorts across the continent. The new league will be named WCDS which stands for World Cup Downhill Soccer.

No fair nominating the Edmonton Oilers, either. Use your imaginations, you poor starved brain-dead wretches. And no fair nominating teams that are already out

The Stanley Cup playoffs begin in early April, and come to a stirring climax in early October, just in time for the beginning of the 1986-87 NHL season.

Food in sport

By Sandy Leeward
WLU TODAY

Due to underfunding, Wonder Land University has embarked upon an unorthodox, but cost-saving measure that will have long-range effects on Aqua Land (formerly the Athletic Complex).

Dr. Jocular Weir announced last Thursday to the assembled jock-types at the Athletic Banquet that the university will substitute leftover Dining Hall food for sports equipment.

"This is an ideal compromise," he said. "We have to cut back somewhere to keep our sacrosanct $8-million dollar surplus gathering dust in bank vaults. And since the Dining Hall throws a lot of food away every day, it is a logical solution to utilize it in the Athletic department."

Students were ambivalent to the decision.

"I don't know how to take this news," said Bald Eagle hockey great Bob Needsastick. "It might be fun to play with frozen steakettes, but I don't know how other teams in the league will react. There's a good chance we will be laughed off the ice."

Dr. Weir's announcement that eggs would replace ping-pong balls was greeted with disbelief from Wonder Land table tennis champ, Pong Ping.

"They better be hard-boiled," he said, shaking his head.

The President's innovations include using dinner rolls as life preservers, squash for shot puts, and instead of landing on mats, high jumpers will land in a soft cushion of chocolate pudding. In addition, javelin throwers will be forced to toss bananas.

"As long as they don't make the women's championship curling team play with stale bagels instead of stones, it's okay. That would be the last straw," said women's athletic supporter Bookie Teach.

COMMENT by Rod Bleating

As the current NHL season grinds to a merciful halt, I feel it to be my civic duty to impart to you poor illiterate australopithecians some Pearls Of Wisdom from the great Mount Olympus (my space in WLU TODAY). You, gentle readers, are indeed fortunate that you have someone like Yours Truly to turn to for straight answers in this confusing world we live in. I never had anything like that when I was a kid.

For starters, you can write off the Edmonton Oilers as a team of any possible significance in the upcoming Stanley Cup playoffs. The Oilers are the most overrated bunch of charlatans to come down the pike since those fat-cat Montreal Canadian teams who faked all those Stanley Cups in the 70s.

Anybody can score bucketloads of goals in this age of watered-down expansion hockey and useless, overrated fakes like Larry Robinson, who is nowhere near as good as Rod Langway, who some half-wits accuse of having grown that mustache just to copy Robinson. Don't you believe it. Langway is the greatest defenceman, if not the greatest player of all time, much better than that other noted phony, Wayne Gretzky.

Gretzky is washed up; any half-decent, second-line centre fresh out of any semi-good U.S. high school program — which, after all, is the single most important talent pool for the NHL, producing such perennial All-Stars as Phil Housley — could rack up over 150 assists if he spent every second of his hockey season net-hanging, instead of concentrating on defense, like Rod Langway does.

Hockey is America's game; we invented it, and we played it first, last, best, and we always will. The entire history of the NHL has been nothing but a litany of imperialistic Canadian racism. The megaloma-

Custard leaves Bald Eagles for NBA job

By Barry Lyoneater
WLU TODAY

Kris Custard, WLU Boy's basketball-weaver coach, has been named coach of the Cleveland Cadavers of the Neuterated Basketweavers Association (NBA).

Cleveland had been hot on Custard's tail for the last two days after their previous coach Willie Wimplemeyer died at the hands of an assassin canary who had been hired by the local mafioso to collect some of Wimplemeyer's debts.

A Cleveland spokesman said that the decision had come down to Custard and the team mascot — a stolen store mannequin. Even though the mannequin had a better personality and infinitely better qualifications, Custard got the job because he was taller.

The Cleveland spokesman added that Custard's groveling that he would do anything to leave that beastly bunch of buffoons at WLU did not hurt his chances. Cleveland has been known to hire desperate people in the past.

Custard said: "I just love this opportunity in Cleveland. At sunset the smoke stacks on the horizon are so beautiful to look at and drinking all that polluted water from Lake Eerie ought to make my stay just that much more pleasant."

LIFE LIES

A QUICK READ ON WHAT PEOPLE AREN'T TALKING ABOUT

PASS THE SHRIMP PUFFS: The upcoming fifteen-hour mini-series I Am Filthy Rich, Perfect And There Is No Poetic Justice is set to go into production later this week. Richard Chamberlain and Joan Collins will portray Manhattanites who go to parties and wear designer clothes.

MAKE IT AGAIN, HAL: Hollywood is buzzing about the upcoming remake of Casablanca. Director Hal Needham is planning to make the updated version into a comedy starring Jay Leno and Joan Rivers. It will be called Casablanca II, The Race and feature excessive car stunts as Rick and Ilsa drive Corvette Stingrays to the airport.

SEX AND FAST FOOD: Dr. Ruth Westheimer has signed with a major fast food chain. She will be promoting a line of naughty fast foods called Eat Me. Included in the menu are handy dandy onion rings, jumbo hot dogs and an inflatable Ronald McDonald.

LOSERS? NO, WINNERS!: The winners of the not-so-annual Terry Jones look-alike contest were announced yesterday. First place finisher Harry "Snapper" Organs exploded seconds after winning. Runners-up Welter Michael Jones and Eddy Nobullshit Jones will now resume their extensive political campaigning with Ann Bracket Miss Bracket Elk. There were no winners of the Mr. Gumby look-alike contest as neither contestants nor Mr. Gumby could find their way there.

ROLAND AND MARIE: Sources close to Utah's Osmond family made a surprising announcement Wednesday, revealing that Donny and Marie Osmond have assumed new identities as Roland Orzabal and Curt Smith of rock group Tears For Fears. Faced with diminishing popularity, the "little bit country, little bit rock and roll" duo decided to abandon their Mormon beliefs in favour of pop psychology. "No-one has even noticed Roland's breasts," an Osmond family spokesperson said.

IT'S A WIG: Bald guys across North America were shocked to learn that Sv Sperling, president/founder of Hair Club For Men and inventor of the strand-by-strand hair process, wears a toupee. The debonaire Sperling, seen on television commercials with a lush head of acrylic hair, was beaten to within an inch of his life by thousands of balding men who had hoped to restore both their hairlines and a shred of personal dignity. "I'm not just the president, I'm also a client," Sperling groaned in agony.

HAWAII $50 BILLION: Deposed Phillipine good guy Ferdinand Marcos has been rehearsing for his new part as a devil-may-care detective and narcotics officer on a new production of Hawaii Five-O. Marcos and special guest star Richard Nixon will play Crunchit and Tubby, veterans of political wars and wearers of stunningly gaudy fashions. Marcos will reportedly be receiving $75 per episode, plus meals.

GIMME AN OSCAR: Lionel Richie, ever the sophisticated songwriter, has decided he will parlay his Academy Award for Best Song into ever more and more commercial endorsements. Richie will do television spots for anyone with a few bucks. He is also hoping to play Sun City, at least after South Africa is taken over by Pepsi-Cola, Incorporated.

GEMINI CAUSES CANCER: Sky watchers will regret seeing Hailey's Comet pass through the constellation of Cancer, after they learn that viewing the comet may cause retinal cramps. It has also been determined the strained necks of comet-watchers may be responsible for the loss of 750,000 person-hours of labour in North American industry.

Is Paul McCartney dead? Who cares? We're all sick of that story. The real news is John Lemon is alive! His alleged murder in 1980 by Mark David Chapstick was nothing but a marketing ploy by his conniving wife Yukko Oh No to increase record sales.

Between 1980, when he was "killed", and 1984, when he emerged with a new identity, John Lemon was held captive in a bedroom by his wife, with no one for companionship but his beloved teddy bear.

Conclusive evidence of Lemon's state of being was secured by WLU TODAY through extensive investigative reporting. What follows is just some of the evidence obtained:

■ When played backward, the Beatles' Sergeant Leper's Lonely Darts Club Ham says, "Why the hell are you playing your records backward? It's bad for your turntable and it doesn't do wonders for your record collection either." The K-Tell corporation has marketed the Beatles' Backward Masking Decoder, which determines the real meaning of the message to be, "So Paul is dead. Big deal! You'll always have John."

■ In the picture on the back of The John Lemon Collection, Lemon is not wearing any shoes. Since Crabby Road's cover shows Paul McCartney without any shoes, it is obvious that Paul may be dead, but John is certainly alive.

■ In addition, Gorge is a hairy

Krishnut, and Gringo thinks he's an actor.

■ The song A Day In The Wife is about the plot to stage a fake murder of John.

■ John's current album is called John Lemon Live, not "dead."

Rapidly running out of recorded material left over from when John was "alive," Yukko was getting worried about maintaining a steady income. Realizing John could not record new material under his real name without raising suspicions, Yukko found an alternative. She remembered John's son Julius, a product of his marriage to Symplia Lemon. With cosmetic surgery, John was able to release A Lot in 1984 as Julius Lemon.

The real Julius Lemon told WLU TODAY: "How could I have released an album? I can't even play an instrument or carry a tune." The real victim of this shameless affair — besides Joe Consumer who got sucked into buying all those Lemon albums — is Mark David Chapstick. No murder was ever committed, yet he is in jail for this non-existent crime.

Yukko found it too hard to "imagine no possessions," so an innocent man is in prison.

Memorable Conformists at Turret

Infamous bar band: The Memorable Conformists have always given audiences what they want. Singer Icky DeBenevolent, centre, listens to a Walkman to keep up on Manilow hits.

Nobody showed up

Last night in the Raymond Chandler Pavilion in downtown Los Angeles, the second annual Awards 'R Us! awards were given out.

Some of Hollywood's top entertainers were present, including Gary Collins, Joyce DeWitt and Ruth Buzzi. Hosts Barbara Mandrell and Michael J. Fox's younger brother gave out hundreds of awards, as the entertainment industry never tires of patting itself on the back. Some of the more notable awards given out were:

■ The Space-Time Continuum Award, presented annually to the soap opera that can drag out a single day for the longest time, goes to The Young and the Restless which turned a single day's search for Baaren into a week.

■ The No, You'll Have To Walk On Water Award went to the Academy Of Motion Pictures and Sciences, for not nominating Stephen Spielberg for best director in this year's Oscar race.

■ The I Can Walk On Water Award went to Sting, Sly Stallone and Philip Michael Thomas, none of who bothered to show up.

■ The Plastic Award given annually to the entertainer who most resembles a Kenner figurine, went to Rob Lowe and Donna Mills.

■ Finally, the award for, the best all-around, bestest of everybody in the whole wide world of entertainers, was, of course given to Barbara Mandrell, who again has won the hearts of sophisticated American audiences. Ms. Mandrell thanked her son, her surgeon and mostly God, for giving her the strength to make mediocre country music

Sedated rock perfect at WLU

Cover band makes rowdy fans shout for more milk with their cookies

A well-mellowed Turret purred in enjoyment last Saturday as the Memorable Conformists rolled out tune after rocking tune.

Between hits like The Sounds of Silence and If I Had A Hammer, the impeccably turned-out group sipped glasses of milk and blew kisses to the audience.

The evening suffered a brief downsizing during the last set, when lead singer Icky DeBenevolent crooned For All The Girls I've Loved, accompanied by a soulful lute player.

"I realize these guys have to grow as artists, but why is all this sexual innuendo necessary?" complained a visibly disgruntled, Tab-swilling spectator.

"Darn it, I brought my sister to hear the Memorable Conformists and I'm gosh-darn-it-all embarrassed!" said one red faced Phys Ed major. "I don't pay $5000 a year to attend an educational institution to hear some milk-crazed jerk insult women in my school bar. And in front of my baby sis!"

The Turret staff had trouble restraining some enraged fans from hurling Cheetohs at the stage. Harmony was restored when DeBenevolent quickly and inconspicuously switched to a stirring rendition of Whenever I See Your Face.

All in all, it was a fantastic, really, really fantastic evening. One starchy-eyed Sociology major was heard to moan, "It's so perfect! I can hear the Memorable Conformists and underline the dates in my lecture notes AT THE SAME TIME!"

The last word goes to the Turret staff, who reputedly enjoyed this show more than anything they've ever seen before ever. "Everyone stayed in their seats. Nobody sat on the floor. I had a great evening!" said one nice-looking guy.

Our waitress was heard to sigh: "there's a place for the Memorable Conformists somewhere in God's Kingdom, and that place is definitely Wonder Land University. I hope the Turret band co-ordinator brings them here again real soon!"

A DAY IN THE WIFE

*I tied a noose today, oh boy
Around a lucky neck who made a trade
And though the noose was rather tight
I just had to pull, I broke the golden rule*

*He blew his mind out in a bar
He didn't notice that the beer was green
A crowd of people stood and cheered
They'd seen his case before Nobody was really sure if he was gonna drink some more*

*I'd love to turn you in...
I saw some lieth today, oh boy
The German army had just shot a man
A crowd of people said Hoo-ray
But I just had to puke, having worn a toque*

*I'd love to turn you in...
Woke up, fell on the floor
Asked if I could sleep some
more Found my way outside and saw a gun
And looking up, I noticed it was bait
Found my note, and grabbed a rat
Made my wife in seconds flat
Found my hay upstairs and made a joke
And somebody spoke and I fell into a stream Ahhhhh...*

*I tied a noose today, oh boy
4,000 moles in my sweet
British rear
And though the moles were rather tall
They had to catch them all
Now they know how many holes it takes to fill Alumni Hall*

Saint John

By Eamond R. Grendel Jr.
WLU TODAY

Kitchener's Embassy Club was the scene for the most unique event in religious and musical history on Easter Sunday. Luminaries from around the world were on hand for the ordination of a saint.

Pope Jon Pall II flew in from the Vatican to officiate over the most important event of his papacy. The individual canonized is none other than John (Rottin') Lydown.

The Pope, resplendent in purple leather vestments, introduced a surprise guest — God. In an interview with WLU TODAY, the deity stated, "I've long been a fan of John's, from way back in his Pistol days. He was like a young Moses."

Another surprise guest at the canonization was Sid Viscuous, who arrived in time to slam dance with God and the pope to local band Gornby Salade and the Radioactive Burns. B.H. McGrail, lead singer, remarked "we've never played before, and I don't think we will again. Those guys are just too crazy."

The Pope was questioned about the validity of Lydown's sainthood: "Are you kidding? How could anybody be so obnoxious, annoying, and talentless and still sell records? That is a miracle! Besides, if we did bend the rules a bit, who cares? This is a PARTY!!

St. John was annoyed with WLU TODAY. "Fuck off," he jested, "I don't do fucking interviews." Turbo Thompson, owner of the Embassy Club encouraged St. John to apologize, and Rottin' did: "I'm sorry for telling you to fuck off, but I'm kind of nervous, you know, being a saint now and everything. Maybe it will help the sales of my new album."

Henry Rollings from Black Flag and Jello Biafra of the Dead Kennedys showed up in time to catch FGTKT (Four Guys That Killed Trotsky), a punk band from Thorn Hill.

Amidst all of the slamming and drinking, everyone paid tribute to St. John. Pencildine Margolis, bass player for FGTKT, called Lydown "an inspiration to many for being such an asshole, but in the Christian sense of the word."

The Embassy Club was finally busted by Kitchener's finest. Sid and God sang My Way all the way to jail, where they spent the night in the drunk tank before returning to heaven. St. John beat up Jello Biafra for calling him St. Rotten. Lydown left with the Pope in the papal limousine for parts unknown.

The owners of the Embassy Club have submitted a bill to the Vatican for the damage, estimated at $30,000.

John Lydown: Saint or sinner? The halo shows.

BEHIND THE SCENES WITH THE BORING AND UNKNOWN

REVIEW

By Blott Runtkowski

Not keeping promises

The promises made on Prime Minister's Flynn Baloney's first record are never fulfilled. Many people will buy it, only to discover he is just another pretty face with a very large chin.

The lead track is entitled Jobs, Jobs, Jobs. Careful listening reveals these jobs are only meant for personal friends and party faithful.

Record Majority is a song with great comedic overtones. It now appears, however, Baloney will be another "one election wonder" for the Regressive Purgatives.

A guest appearance is made by Bitter Pills on the song Tough But Fair. This budgetary ballad seems to contradict Pills' earlier hit, Sacred Trust.

When Irish Eyes Are Smiling is a cover version recorded live on St. Patrick's Day, 1985. It is a duet with fellow Irishman Ronald "Bonzo" Raygun, and both singers are badly off-key in disgracing their country.

Side two opens with Rancid Tuna, a delightful tale of the release of canned fish that had been declared unfit for human consumption. Baloney's explanation of this affair is also unfit for human consumption.

The next track, Gallup Polls, deals with the slip in popularity of the Regressive Purgatives and the simultaneous slip of Baloney's smile.

Energy Minister Pat Corry makes an appearance on Falling Oil Prices (What Falling Oil Prices?). She tries to convince the listener she is really convincing the impoverished oil companies to lower gasoline prices.

On the final track, Patronage, Baloney wonders aloud what jobs he can find for the Wonder Land University Biznobs Class of '86. "Want a job? Join the Tories/ That's the end of all your worries/ Show us that your blood is blue/ And we will find a job for you."

On the whole, Flynn Baloney's record is truly awful. It is enough to make a grown Canadian throw up.

Which one looks like Snoop?

By Jack Torrance
WLU TODAY

Unbelievable as it may sound, undeniable evidence has shown WLU TODAY Sports Editor Snoop Purloin is actually the famous actor Jack Nicholson.

WLU TODAY staffers made the discovery early last week while engaging in the weekly ritual of "Anyone seen Snoop?"

The sports section was axed by Editor Red Sailor last week because Snoop had still not appeared by Tuesday afternoon.

Yet delinquent WLU TODAY staffers not at the paper — where they should have been on Monday night — spotted Purloin at the Academy Awards ceremony hoping he'd win an Oscar.

"I always thought there was an uncanny resemblance between them two. Who would have guessed my baby Snoop would grow up to lead a double life, one as Jack Nicholson," said Snoop's

Mom. "I never would have believed it except these newspaper people showed me this photograph, so I supposed they must be right." Snoop's Mom added.

"Kinda cute though, ain't he?" Snoop's Mom went on.

"Sure am proud of him, my Snoop," Snoop's Mom continued.

"Ever since he was a little baby, with all that hair on his arms, legs, and chest, I always thought to myself, 'Well little Snoop, you gonna be famous some day.'" Snoop's Mom went on. She wouldn't stop.

"I love my Snoop," she said.

Nicholson/Purloin, now ensconced in an Upper East Side penthouse suite, is shunning all contacts from his Waterloo life now the secret is out.

Nicholson/Purloin confirmed the startling disclosure. "It was the sunglasses, wasn't it? Dammit, I shouldn't have worn the sunglasses!"

Richard Gere, or...

Jack Nicholson?

WE NEED HELP!!

Student Publications keeps working all summer long. We have to produce two summer issues of The Cord Weekly, The WLU-er and Directory, The Pocket Planner, and The Wall Calendar. A lonely editor could sure use some volunteer help in getting these publications finished and off to the printer.

We need the services of writers, production creatives, artists, photographers and people with darkroom experience.

There will be meetings in April for all those interested in doing something creative during the summer. And remember, working at Student Publications isn't as fun as catching rays, but it doesn't cause cancer, either!

Interested individuals should call 884-2990 for more details. Ask for Matt, and be prepared to provide three references, a portfolio, a blood sample, a class X driver's license and a full set of cranial x-rays.

Working drawings and photographs are now being considered as cover art for the WLU-er and Directory, The Pocket Planner, and The Wall Calendar. Please include two or more samples of your work. The artwork and final design concepts will be immortalized in summer publications. Check by the Conditions before the Games begin in the NCC for more details.

Wonder Land University Weather control

By Ether McGas
WLU TODAY

Students' grades are being seriously threatened by the arrival of spring and the administration has plans to amend the situation.

The recent warm weather has resulted in students by the thousands, (relative hundreds here at Wonder Land University), taking to their backyards, balconies or even the limited grass-space on campus to enjoy the sun and to socialize. Consequently, their study time is diminishing.

WLU administration is upset at this recent meteorological development. "If no one studies for finals, no one will do well, and it will reflect poorly on the university," said Dr. Huddle Your Bum, master vice-president academic. "Sure, we expect and hope that some students will fail, but some have to do well!"

Contacts have been made with Soviet defector Ivan Thunderstormovich. "We hear that he has knowledge of how to control the weather," Bumsmaster claimed. "Remember the winter of '76? That was his doing. We hope to arrange for a cold and rainy spell to coincide with the exam period."

A reactionary students group, headed by Brain Topless, president-electricuted of Wonder Land University Students' and Others' Organization (WLU-SOO), is trying to undermine the actions of the administration. In a statement circulated in the Fork Room, they claim students' rights are being violated. "Warm weather, tossing a baseball and getting a head start on a tan are basic student rights. If we let the administration get away with this, who knows what will happen next."
