N.B. The article "The Art of Minor Operations: Canadian Trench Raiding, 1915-1918" by COLIN GARNETT in the Vol. 24, No. 1 edition of Canadian Military History was revised after printing and these revisions are reflected in the online edition. As a result, pagination differs between the print and online editions.

New from LCMSDS Press

Canadian Battlefields of the First World War: A Visitor's Guide. Terry Copp, Mark Humphries, Nick Lachance, Caitlin McWilliams, and Matt Symes. Waterloo: LCMSDS Press, 2015.

This revised guide to the Canadian battlefields of the First World War in France and Belgium offers a brief, critical history of the war and of Canada's contribution, drawing attention to the best recent books on the subject. It focuses on the Ypres Salient, Passchendaele, Vimy, and the "Hundred Days" battles and considers lesser-known battlefields as well. Battle maps, contemporary maps, photographs, war art, and tourist information enhance the reader experience.

In addition to its new look, this second edition features new photographs, maps, and a more-detailed history section. A new "Walking the Battlefields" feature allows visitors to follow the path of Canadian troops as they fought at Ypres, the St. Eloi Craters, the Somme, Vimy Ridge, and Bourlon Wood through detailed maps and unit-level text. The tour sections and references have also been updated to reflect recent developments in writing about the Great War in Canada.

BLAINE CHIASSON, GUEST EDITOR

IN THIS ISSUE, guest editor Blaine Chiasson has helped us bring together a number of articles dealing with the Canadian army's experiences in Asia from the Second World War to the Cold War. Here contributions by Galen Roger Perras, Mallory Schartz, and Tony Banham provide an opportunity to reconsider the Canadian Army's role in operations in Hong Kong and Korea. An early post-war study of the experiences of Hong Kong veterans also highlights some of the special problems faced by those ex-soldiers, or rather, the ways in which their experiences were often minimized through pension policy. The editorial board would like to thank Dr. Chiasson for bringing this part of the issue together.

After nearly a quarter century as a print journal, beginning with our next issue in the winter-spring of 2016, Canadian Military History will be available exclusively in an electronic format through a new partnership with Wilfrid Laurier University. It will be accessible at <http://scholars.wlu.ca/cmh/>. We hope you will visit the website frequently and continue to read some of the best work on Canada's military history.

Once again, we want to thank our subscribers for supporting the journal. Over the past two and a half decades, CMH has become the premiere venue for scholars and researchers interested in the military history of Canada and this change represents another step forward. Once we switch to the new format, we intend to try to publish journal articles as quickly as possible. Rather than having to wait a year or two for publication, authors will now be able to see their work in print in a matter of weeks or months. While this has been the norm in scientific journals for some time, CMH will be at the cutting edge of publishing for the social sciences and humanities. Be sure to check back on the website regularly because we expect new articles to appear every few weeks.

We understand that this transition will come as a disappointment to some of our long-time readers and we are sorry for that. Therefore we are offering to make accommodations for long-time journal subscribers who still wish to receive a print copy. If you have subscribed to CMH for more than five years and wish to receive a print copy, we can send you a black-and-white photocopy of the journal on 8.5x11" paper with a large font size. Please note that this will be a photocopy of the online journal, not a bound colour journal as before. This will enable you to read the articles if you cannot access the internet and will be offered on a cost recovery basis.

If you are interested in receiving this print version of the journal, please write to us at the address below with your name and mailing address, enclosing a cheque for $50.00 made out to Wilfrid Laurier University. We look forward to seeing our other subscribers online.
