Laurier Sex Scandal

A hard day's pukefestival

The photos of the crime scene were brutal. Shocking. Nothing any mother's son would want to see before gulping down a bowl of Wheaties and rushing off to another day of rat racing.

There was no doubt about it.

The man known as the Puking Guy had struck again.

An odour hung in the air. Thick. Stifling. It smelled like death. Or maybe bile-soaked McDonalds food. Or maybe both. It was truly a moveable feast. It had moved. People had died because of that moving. It made me want to run over the hills and into the valleys. It made me think of the banktellers' husbands. They would be men without women now.

It was the Bank of Montréal at 666 Dundas Street West where it happened again. Brutal. Shocking. Two bank tellers dead. Murdered. The bank was three stories high. In our time, I have seen few things so shocking. Even what I wrote about in my fifth column, about the bank and the first 49 stories -- even that was not this.

HANK HEMINGWAY

Someone was responsible. The luck, she had run out for sure for these bank tellers, as if the wild bull of death had run them down in the streets of Pampaloma.

The wind was blowing nicely that day, when the old man had set out on his fishing trip. She looked like the kind of girl a man could sleep with for a long time, if only she had some teeth, and if only a guy hadn't got his balls shot off in the war.

They asked me what it was like to kill a man.

"What is it like?"

"What?"

"To kill a man. What is it like?"

"It is like nothing. Nada. Do you want some gum?"

"Gum?"

"Gum. Wait a minute -- is the writer imitating Papa, or did he overdose on some Harold Pinter plays?"

"I don't know. Kiss me."

"Call me Ishmael. And I only am escaped alone to tell thee. The ship came back on her melancholy search the next morning, but, looking for her lost children, all she found was another orphan."

You get the picture. The bank tellers were dead. The stench hung in the air. It was afternoon. There was death. The sun had risen. Also.

And something had pulled their arms off. Clean off, and stolen them too. The two tellers' luck, she was bad. They never had a chance to say goodbye to their legs. Much less arms.

It is good to have skill, but better to have luck.

I was sad.

THE ANNUAL CANADIAN WRITERS' hockey game was a smashing success over the weekend. Here, Northrop Frye checks Robertson Davies into the boards. Frye's team won 7-2.

So sue us!

By COTTON MATHER
Laurier Sun

A lawsuit has been launched against the Sun by the Laurier Personship of Decent Conduct.

"Golly, we can't believe the awful language you people used in a recent issue! It just curls my toes when I think about it!" said LPDC organizer Penny Priddy.

The words the LPDC were objecting to included DIDDLE, POOP and PEEPEE. In case you missed those words, they were DIDDLE, POOP and PEEPEE and various derivations of the three.

The LPDC didn't object to terms such as MOTHERLOVER, CORKSOAKER or LIBERAL HUMANIST because none of those terms were used in the issue in question.

The LPDC also objected to the "ridiculous" use of words longer than three syllables "a whole lotta times" in the issue in question.

"Look, we just want a decent God-fearing paper that we can read without tiring our lips and fingers out too much," said Priddy.

"You can tell these people putting out the Sun are catamites and adulterers and morally incorrect scumbags from the deepest regions of hell."

"The Laureate is my friend," Priddy concluded.

And WLU President John Weir agrees.

"I agree -- university is no place for bad language, radical ideas, people of intelligence, people who can write, people who can think, people with bad teeth, people who don't have blond hair and blue eyes, comic strips with gratuitous violence, the Eveready rabbit, little teeny weeny pale virginal British people with bad posture, long slow wet kisses that last three days, the small of a woman's back, Pete Townsend impersonations, underarm deodorants that smell worse than sweat, people who write letters pretending to be God or Satan or rib trucks that run over people with an ironic grace which suggests a higher power without ever actually proving it."

"And where the hell is Cuba?" Weir added.

Student Publications head honcho Woody Hand doesn't agree, though.

"Cuba is 97 miles from the continental United States," he noted.

On the topic of the Sun he was equally adamant.

"Swearing is good. Very good. We like it up here at the Sun. It indicates fertile minds at work. And like the bird says -- don't mess with us. Because when you mess around with us, we'll really mess you around, you messing-around messing-around messing-around messers of the around sort. Get the messing around picture, m'sieur?"

THE THREE LAUGHING PILL dispensers visited Laurier last week as part of International Pet Birth Control Week, which just got underway. The box o' pills they're holding in the picture are part of a bold new push for contraceptives into the animal kingdom. "It's a brutal thing to spay or castrate your cat or dog -- why not just put them on the Pill instead?" said IPBCW spokesman Bob Barker. The box o' pills here is intended for use by female elephants. "But if the male elephant wants to be responsible, it's a lot easier -- Glad Garbage Bags are really handy," Barker added. The push for pet birth control will receive widespread attention when R.E.M.'s Michael Stipe and the Indigo Girls release their single "I'll give you my Genitals" this week.

After much speculation, it was revealed that a decision is now pending on the government policy on vacillating.

The government spokesperson did not give a confirmed date on the announcement of the final decision, stating that the policy has not been in place to allow for such a decision.

The announcement is not expected to change the functioning of government to a great degree, though. The citizen coalition that pressed for the decision was not present for the announcement.

When asked why, a representative said that the committee had met to elect a representative, but the elected candidate chose not to attend. The committee has not decided on an appropriate reprimand for the individual, but has said that this situation is not new.

Rockin' the free world!

By FRENCHY FUCQUA

Wacky Verbose Business Correspondent

United States armed forces are on the move again. In a surprise dawn attack, American paratroopers took Laurier's Peters Building. Their objective: to capture the infamous Jimmy "the Fish" Sphincter.

At a press conference, President Georgie "Porgie Puddin' & Pie" Bush, detailed the reasons for the invasion of WLU, named Operation Just Cause II: Lie Harder. "Well, this invasion thing, necessary to stay the course ... steady ... prudent, at this juncture ... Sphincter baaad!"

Fighting in the narrow corridors of the Peter's Building was fierce, with heavy casualties on both sides. One American soldier shouted "Man, I was in Nam, and that was a piece of cake compared to this. Those biz knobs, man, they come out of nowhere with those damned gold pens and accounting books. And they're maniacs -- they'll follow that Sphincter anywhere ... it's fuckin' hell, man!"

The so-called "Biz-Knob Brigades", entrenched in the Peters Building, remain defiant. "They'll never get us out of here", says one. "Hell, even if we wanted to leave, we couldn't find our way out."

International reactions vary. Brian "Brain" Mulroney, commenting on the invasion of Canada, commented "I regard this invasion as a significant step forward in the relations between our two countries. First, the Shamrock Summits, Free Trade ... it's a natural progression. Besides, they're just a bunch o' biz knobs."

Greater Germany approved of the American action, calling it "a favourable precedent for international relations, for peace and ... SIEG HEIL ... whoops." France, upon learning of the American invasion, offered to surrender.

With the invasion only hours old, Jimmy "the Fish" Sphincter had fled to Laurier's Seminary Building. The American military immediately surrounded the building with loudspeakers and began loud broadcasts of comments taken from hundreds of business student evaluations.

Danny "Dingbat" Quayle slowly remarked on the invasion "I don't understand this invasion of the Peters Building. Why go to so much trouble just to get a urinal? Where's George? Is the National Guard full? Daddy?"

Georgie Bush had this to say on the progress of the invasion, "Staying the course ... 80 per cent popularity rating ... Dan Quayle a goddamned mor...uh, gaining acceptance. Thousand points of light ...dah, dah dah, in a garbage can, in a garbage can, got a kinder, gentler machine gun hand -- keep on rockin' in the free world!"

Music punks

By RIMSKY KORSNOTT
Laurier Sun

The police of Waterloo were summoned today to the campus of Laurier, where year-long protests finally took a turn for the worst.

The police, acting out of concern for the campus's sex attitudes, acted swiftly in removing students demanding 'rhythmic freedom.'

The students involved were in Third Year music. They had been observed all school year making rhythmic freedom protests from 12:30 to 1:30pm, down the corridor of the second floor of the Aird Centre.

Their stomping, waving arms and chanting rhythmic slogans were finally unbearable for John Hergel, the Extreme Commander of Aird Centre Affairs. He notified police after he noticed that there were foot marks being left in the carpet. "The floors will have to be replaced now," was the only comment understandable from the weeping Hergel.

Dr. C. Morrison, teaching in a classroom outside the protest area remarked, "It's about time this rhythmic nonsense ended. The students' time should be completely dedicated to theory. The world depends on my educational techniques in the field of music theory."

During removal of the students it was discovered that one of the students was indeed the infamous professor Elsaesser. Known throughout the music community from his demand in rhythmic excellence, he was the immediate suspect as ring leader of the group.

Uttering only, "Ta-ta-tee-tee-ta...", it is suspected he will be arraigned on charges of insanity, disturbing the peace, and distraction of theory class.

Editor's Note: Look, I know, I know -- this story was only funny to Music students and people interested in esoteric humour. But hey, the biz knobs get their own section in the Cord and a whole newspaper. I think we can humour the Music students with a story from time to time.

At least the Music students won't be screwing anybody for a living. Oh ho -- I'm joking!

But seriously folks -- ain't life the damndest, just the damndest thing? And remember, everyone -- this is the JOKE ISSUE, so don't start off with the libel stuff, or the 'bad taste' stuff again!

Sgt. Joe Friday

Police Constable Joe Friday, stated, "If it's rhythm, there's sex involved."

William Shatner for President?

By GENE RODDENBERRY
Laurier Sun

Classified documents leaked from the Prime Minister's office have revealed that the Free Trade Agreement was created in order that the United States could annex a financially-ravaged Canada, opening the way for Canadian actor-philosopher William Shatner to run for the presidency of the combined United States of North America as early as 1992.

Under current U.S. legislation, the President must be born in the United States.

When questioned on the matter, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney was surprisingly candid.

"It's all true, and there isn't a damned thing all you cheap whining punks can do about it, because our (the federal Progressive Conservatives') term of office can run up to another three years, and you can be damned sure that we're not leaving till we're taken over by our fine friends to the South."

In an interview with the Sun, PC all-around arrogant scumball John Crosbie echoed Mulroney's comments. "Nyah, nyah, nyah!", the eloquent Maritimes minister said, before adding a sexist slur which is too vile and loathsome to repeat here (the punchline is "The House That Dripped Blood," so build from there.)

It appears that the Republican Party, tired of President Bush's wimpy attitude, want a take-charge kind-of-guy, the sort of man who could turn the United States around. Plans to annex Austria so that Arnold Schwarzenegger could run were put on hold when Schwarzenegger said that he wouldn't be president unless Lou Ferrigno could be vice.

And while Bill Shatner's directorial work on the latest Star Trek opus left "something to be desired," according to Republican head weasel Lee Atwater, the "Captain Kirk persona is the sort of thing America needs to lead it into the 19th--er--21st century."

Surprisingly, a Gallup Poll of American voters released this week finds a huge groundswell of support for the ex-patriate Canadian who made his mark on popular culture by baring his chest and saying such classic lines as "Let's get the hell out of here!" and "But for how long, Mr. Spock, for how long?" Seventy-three per cent of Americans said they would vote for the man who would be James Kirk. That figure goes up to 87 per cent if Shatner would also promise never to direct another film.

When reached for comment, Shatner was typically humble. "With Leonard Nimoy as vice-president, DeForrest Kelley as Secretary of State and James Doohan as Secretary of Defense, we'll show those damned Romulans and Klingons--er, I mean, Japanese and Soviets -- who really is the boss in this arm of the galaxy!"

DeForrest Kelley wasn't so sure, though. In an interview with the Sun, he opined "Damn it, Sun, I'm a second-rate actor, not a Secretary of State!"

BILL SHATNER is already in training for his hoped-for presidency of the United States. The U.S. sent him to Lithuania yesterday, where only McCoy and Scotty kept him from duking it out with Gorby himself!

Floral scent captivates Stuart Lewis

By DAISY DOWNTOWN
The Laurier Sun

The scent of flowers has mysteriously permeated the halls of WLUSU for the past couple of weeks, and many are just plain "pissed off" with the situation.

The illusive scent of daisies, lilacs, and especially roses has been noted by several WLUSU/WLUSP staff members, most notably VP: University Affairs, Stuart Lewis, who claims to be "turned on" by the floral smell.

"UUUMMMMM!", said Lewis, "I love that smell. It's just so flowery. Like roses, you know."

Lewis attributes the scent to the shampoo used by one of the Cord Weekly's illustrious writers. "Salon Selectives", he said. "I use it myself."

The writer, who demanded that she remain unnamed, dispelled Lewis' belief by saying, "It's not me he's talking about, but if he ever gets close enough to smell my hair, it won't be the scent of roses he remembers."

Karen Gordon, the new Executive VP-elect thinks the smell has gotten out of hand, and must be bottled. "I'm getting tired of Stuart walking around the office sniffing. He gets so enraptured by the captivating scent that he cannot function. He stares wistfully out the window, dreaming of the scent's source."

WLUSU Big Cheese Al Strathdee agreed with Gordon, expressing concern for Lewis. "We just can't control the guy, just can't control him. It's just the damndest, it's the damndest."

Dr. Weir, WLU Head Honcho, said as long as it wasn't costing the university any money, he didn't see anything wrong with it.

Dean of Students, Dr. Fred Nichols, said he hopes to have the problem under control within a couple of days. "We plan to locate the source of the scent" he said. When asked what he plans to do once he locates the source, Dr. Nichols could only say "It's our next priority. Really it is. It is. Yep."

WLUSP only hopes the smell is taken care of soon, so Lewis will drift back down the hall where he came from.

In a surprise move, WLU has dissolved its School of Business and Economics. To take its place, three new faculties will be created, including a journalism school, and a special 'Saving the Environment' M.A. program.

"It's our way of saying 'The days of ruthless cutthroat lying bloodthirsty scumball capitalism are over'," said Dean Murray, who will volunteer to step down.

"Oh, I'm not retiring," Murray made a point to note. "I'm going into the drought-blasted towns and villages of Africa, where my money and my two strong hands can hopefully do some good for this Earth before I pass on to the next life. Hopefully, I haven't wasted all my good karma in this existence I've led up until now."

Student newspaperperson Joe Claus will head up the journalism school. "I just hope that I can help people come to appreciate the truth and beauty of newspapers, of telling the truth, and of being a fighter for freedom like I have been all my life," Claus said to the Sun.

THE BRIDGE AT CHAPPAQUIDDICK: was Smokey the Bear there too, plotting and flexing his razor-sharp claws? Will we ever know the truth?

ANNUAL HOUSEHOLD RUBBISH COLLECTION

Chappaquiddick: Was Smokey there? And who shot JFK? And Luther King Jr? And Hoffa, and.....

By SIRHAN SIRHAN
Laurier Plottin' and Plannin'

Startling new evidence has come to life which links the Chappaquiddick incident which devastated Ted Kennedy's political career with the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy, Robert Kennedy, Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., labour organizer Jimmy Hoffa and renowned voice-of-cartoon characters Mel Blanc.

According to Fred Mertz's new book Yours Truly, Smokey the Bear, the beloved symbol of fire prevention has actually been a horrifying killer of America's greatest human beings over the last few years.

"He's a jealous bear. People are stealing his press, everyone's talking about 'Camelot-this' and 'I have a dream' that -- something just snapped," said Mertz from his Manhattan apartment home.

And the CIA, along with the National Association of Fire Fighters, has been covering up evidence about Smokey's secret life for decades now, Mertz also alleges.

"They were embarrassed, scared, and they wanted to look after one of their own. Do you blame them? When he wants to be, Smokey is a damned charming carnivore."

"But like most bears, he has a brain the size of a pea and an ego the size of 19 mattresses. Something's gotta give."

Smokey the Bear's press secretary is denying the whole thing. Yogi Bear, who has been with Smokey since his own cartoon series folded in the mid-1960s, said "Rararargghhararghgrarg!" when interviewed by the Sun.

The FBI, though, is investigating the allegations.

"These are serious charges Mr. Mertz has brought forth," said FBI spokesperson Charles Bronson.

"If they're true -- or if that damned bear kills my friends, my wife or my daughter -- well, then, I guess I'm gonna have to kick some serious ursine butt," Bronson added, with a grim smile engraved on his lips.

Poland pulverized USSR says Ha ha ha

FROM A BAR IN LITHUANIA (NCC)- According to Soviet head honcho Mikhail Gorbachev, he was "just joking" with what he called "all this human rights liberal humanist mumbo-jumbo of the last few years."

"The Bear's back, and he ain't taking prisoners!"

And to back up his statements, Gorbachev declared war yesterday on the entire civilized world, starting with Poland, which the USSR nuclear-bombed into a smoking twisted crater early this morning.

"Ha ha ha!" Gorbachev said in a prepared statement for Western journalists, "Now no one will have Poland to kick around any more! Ha ha ha!"

However, most Western powers are remaining neutral in this latest development in Eastern Europe.

"We're hoping that Gorbachev's insane bloodlust will spend itself before he gets to Western Europe or, God forbid, North America," U.S. President George Bush said to a press conference yesterday.

Feeling sexy and the ducks

I was feeling sexy, but sort of nervous, so I made like I'd been shot in the gut, and I was struggling (with a grim smile on my lips to impress any girls around) to keep the blood from leaking out from my stomach.

I stumbled to the bar and ordered a Scotch-and-soda. The trick to doing this when you're 18 like I am is that you order it fast so's they don't check your identification. But the guy at the bar said "Hey, let me see some ID pal -- you look pretty young."

"Hey," I said, "I'm 25. I just look young for my age!"

I ended up getting a milk. There are some bars where you can pull this stuff off, and some where you can't. It was a lousy bar anyway -- a bunch of stiff and losers, and no one I'd want to dance with, except for this one skinny blond girl who had bad teeth, but looked like she might be a good dancer.

I wandered over, and here's the funny thing -- I pretended like I was James Dean in Rebel without a Cause as I did it. I'm always doing stuff like that, without even thinking about it. Sometimes I think I'm crazy, and sometimes I know I am.

I tried to strike up a conversation with this girl. I was really cool, really suave, but she was a really bad conversationist, looking around all the time behind me, as if she was going to see anyone in this lousy place. Goddam, it was a lousy place.

SAM SALINGER

Just for a joke, I suddenly said, "Hey, isn't that Al Strathdee over there?" She whirled around, and I said, "You just missed him -- he just went out the door!"

She pouted a bit at that. I sort of liked her, except for the fact that she was a bad conversationist, and didn't seem to be too bright. Some of her friends came over, and I got a laugh when she told them she'd seen Al Strathdee.

"Where? Where?" they asked. It killed me, it really did. It was hard to keep from laughing, so I pretended I'd been shot in the gut again, and that laughing at these silly girls would make my whole body ache. Suddenly, I had an urge to call Leslie again, but I figured she'd be in bed by now, and her mother would answer, and I didn't want to have to explain why I was calling at this time of the morning.

So I sat there and listened to them chatter away. Turned out there were visiting from goddam Western. I tried to find out what their majors were, or what sort of music they liked, but all they could talk about was seeing Al Strathdee, or some other big guy around here. It killed me, it really did.

Finally I gave up on them and stumbled out into the night. I hailed the first cab by, and told him to drive me home. He was a real talkative guy, this cab driver. He was telling me about his kids and his house and what it was like to be a cabby, while I sat there and counted my money. Then I thought of something.

"Hey, mister, the ducks -- what happens to the ducks in Waterloo Park when everything freezes?"

"What kind of question is that? The Schneider's meat factory rounds them up while they're sleeping, just before the first frost, and turns 'em into weiners. They're full of nutrients, you know."

It killed me. It really did.

Clouseau enters Liberal race

By GAY DIVORCEE
Seventh Circle of Hell

A shocking entrant into the Liberal leadership race has thrown the whole outcome into doubt. A Chrétien cake walk has turned into...what?

A Clouseau coronation, perhaps?

Yes, that's right -- world-renowned sleuth Inspector Jacques Clouseau has thrown his battered Fedora into the Liberal leadership race.

"Eh, I 'ave de same goofy accent as Chrétien, and I do not speak out of one side of de mout' or de udder -- I am for all of Canada!", Clouseau said in one of the most offensive political speeches since the last time John Crosbie opened his big fat mouth.

But voters identify with the bumbling French detective.

"I like him. He's one suave fuck," said Liberal hanger-on Frank Booth. "And he drinks Pabst Blue Ribbon. Damn, he's suave!"

Canadians agree. In a Travis McHaggis poll released after Clouseau's entrance into the race, nearly 90 per cent of Canadians said they thought Clouseau was "suave."

And the city of Sault-Ste. Marie has voted him an honorary citizen already.

"He's the kind of bumbling, stupid, non-threatening French person which Canada needs more of," said Soo mayor Biff McBiff.

Even Brian Mulroney is happy with Clouseau's entrance into the leadership race.

"I had sex with the man at a PC fund raiser in London, Ontario back in November 1979, and man, is this cat good in the sack!" Mulroney raved about Clouseau.

"When he enters something, he really enters it!", Mulroney added enthusiastically, with slobber dripping down his ridiculous chin.

Former Prime Minister Pierre Eliot Trudeau isn't happy with this latest entrant into the leadership race of the party which Trudeau himself once led for what seemed like close to a century.

"This Clouseau is a parody of a leadership candidate," Trudeau noted. "But unfortunately, parody, not parity, is what concerns Canadians now. You are one screwed bunch of fucks, and if you think I want to come back and lead you, think again. However, I have edited another book on the subject, so if you want to shell out $30..."

Trudeau added "Ah, to hell with it. Any country that would elect Brian Mulroney, let Wayne Gretzky get away, let its postal system be dismantled and its railroad system be castrated -- such a society deserves to be hurled into the abyss of slimy mediocrity from which it may never emerge again. I hope you all burn like rabid gophers in a hell of your own imaginings, you spineless mewling puking jellyfish excuses for members of a democratic society."

"Have a nice day," Trudeau added, before riding off into the sunset.

Fisher fined!

Special to the Sun

WLU professor Jim Fischer was jailed last night for allegedly threatening a police officer who ticketed his car in the Tim Horton's parking lot around 10 pm.

"I know who you are and I know what you look like!" Fischer allegedly screamed over the phone at the officer who was believed to have ticketed his car. "You have 48 hours to do something about this negative ticket!"

The terrified officer promptly apologized to Mr. Fischer and revoked the ticket immediately. Police Chief Jim McNuttchon was not intimidated by Fisher, however, and ordered his jailed indefinitely for his obnoxious behavior.

STUART LEWIS is tired of being pushed around like a little girly-woman! Look out, world!

Sex no more!

By J. JANA WATSONPFEIFFER
Laurier Sun

A new Angus Reid poll suggests that the Canadian birth rate is falling rapidly for a simple reason.

Seventy-seven percent of Canadians don't know what sex is.

The survey, in which 6000 Canadians were polled, is accurate nine times out of ten plus or minus five percent during months ending in 'vember', according to the polling agency.

However, the poll results have come under flak from a number of sources, including the Wilfrid Laurier Faculty of Social Work.

"Seventy-seven per cent? That figure is way too low," said DSA spokesperson Marion Fistingyourface.

"In a truly non-gender-biased society, no one would know what sex is, and thus we would all be free from the stigma of gender specificity. The mere act of sex imposes strictures on human beings which are evil and depraved. If the world is going to become a good one, we must reach a hundred per cent rate in Canada before the year 2000."

"The fascist core at the heart of human sexuality must be stamped out by stamping out first the sex drive, and then sex itself."

"As long as people go to bed, they'll act funny towards one another," Fistingyourface concluded.

The poll has also come under fire for another factor which may have led to skewed test results -- all of the polls were mistakenly issued to the same person.

"Look, I don't know anything about any damned poll," Students' Union President Stuart Lewis said before running into the men's washroom on the third floor of the Pickle-up-your-Ass Campus Centre with a copy of Penthouse magazine and a handful of paper towels.

Hey kids! Grab a groin!

Groins. Who needs 'em?

Not me, that's for sure.

Yesterday, I spilled hot coffee on my groin for the third time this week. It made my eyes water, the pain was so intense. I hate when that happens.

But it finally made me think -- where would we be if we didn't have groins?

Gary Hart would be president of the United States.

The pornographic magazine industry would collapse.

Our legs would fall off.

What a different world it would be...without groins!

And another thing -- where do they get skim milk from? Anorexic cows? Makes me wonder.

And why did Batman decide to dress up as a bat? Wouldn't Boaconstrictorman have been just as terrifying? Or Amoebaman? Boy, there's just a wealth of possibilities in the animal world for cinematic excitement!

Golf balls the size of hail were raining down on me as I sat in the lovely restaurant at the Tillson-burg Golf and Country Club, wishing mightily that I was a snowflake being blown across the Antarctic wastes, so hot the day and so slow the waiting service.

LUMPY

It made me think, then, that there is just a meanness in this world when a thirsty man can die of parchedness in the heart of a crowded restaurant. It made me realize the ironies of this life, the sweet sad music that is the unrestrained voice of humanity whenever it forgets to act like a monkey and remembers that it built the pyramids and freed the slaves!

Humour and love and raw red evil. These are the things that make my favourite movie, Ernest saves Christmas, pulse and pump with the stuff of Art made popular and accessible, of archetypal images given life and breath.

But the ending...the ending could have caught more of the sadness and inexplicable disaster of life. For instance, the sled could have flipped over on Ernest, pinning him to the ground. And at night, the ice weasels come!

Tarzan bundolo! Bundolo! Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, lend me your ears -- I come to bury Daniel, not to praise him!

Is it better to take arms against a sea of troubles, or to run away like a scared gopher on a plain full of hungry wolverines?

I am not, that is certain. But if someone offered me oral sex, I would take it gladly. I am, after all, merely a man, and a groin is a groin is a groin is a groin, and all the wonders that glisten and pulsate at the heart of the groins of all men and women are what make this mad bad crazy world the fun place it is to drop a litter.

Sun Worship

With the Leafs starting their playoff quest for the Stanley Cup this week, the Sun would like to take time in this editorial to remind all Laurier sports fans of the Maple Leaf Creed. Since those Dead Wings are out of the playoffs, we anticipate full support from the Wilfrid Laurier University community.

THE MAPLE LEAF CREED

We believe in Doug Carpenter the Almighty, maker of Leafmania. And in the Maple Leafs, our favourite sons, who were conceived by Conn Smythe, born in Maple Leaf Gardens, suffered under Harold Ballard, were crucified by the media, died with John Brophy and were buried in the cellar of the Norris for years. By 1989-90, they had descended into hell.

In the 1990-91 season, they rose from last place. They ascended into third, where Don Cherry sitteth on the right hand of Doug Carpenter the Almighty, from whence he shall judge the Scandinavians and the Prairie boys.

We believe in the the holy MLG church, the commuting of the Newmarket Saints, the forgiveness of Al Iafrate's sins, the resurrection of Wendel's body, and the Leafs everlasting. Amen.

THE MAPLE Hawks haven't won a University Cup in over seventeen years with White Growling at the helm. That's impressive, but he also has a great winning percentage and three OUAA titles to his credit.

As a true WLU sports fan, I find these winning habits unfortunate.

Now that Hairold Ballard has come back to Laurier after getting the shaft in Toronto, could he maybe put a losing team back on the ice at WLU.

Why doesn't Chancellor Ballard just fire him so that the Maple Hawks can be real brutal for a long time to come?

AL

The making of a machine

It all began one dark stormy Thursday night. The Turret was full, the patrons rowdy and abusive. A drunk tuba player attacked a WLU Campus Police officer with a flashlight and threw him under the wheels of an oncoming Pinto. He was rushed to the hospital, but was pronounced dead on arrival. His body became property of the Administration, as per the release he signed when he joined the force. He was taken to the high-tech medical science wing where they replaced his broken body with cybernetics. In short he became Supercop, the new head of the Campus Police at WLU.

With this new infusion of talent onto the force, things tightened up considerably. Building access was restricted to those who had a valid student card, a letter from their prof stating that they actually were attending this class, a note from the business office verifying that they had no outstanding fees and twenty dollars to cover the wear and tear of unlocking the door.

Unrest became very noticeable among the student population and they did the only thing that they could do. They went to WLUSTU. As they consulted the great sage LEW. He said that they could do very little as Supercop had become a separate force under the administration's new emergency student riot act policy. (Someone had asked for their development fund refund)

Student unrest increased as Supercop implemented the new towing policy. It was a simple policy that no longer involved tickets or tow trucks. All vehicles illegally parked were simply blown up. After two weeks of this policy it is now very easy to find a parking place on campus, all you have to do is look for the black smoke from the burning tires. The last space I parked in had a Mercedes hood ornament laying there. Scary.

I will say that having Supercop around has done amazing things for some of those hard to enforce problems on campus. Nobody is lighting up except in designated zones and the lineups for the pubs are the calmest that they have ever been. Word might have gotten around that the last person who disobeyed Supercop ended up in intensive care at St. Mary's Hospital. (That's where he landed after Supercop hit him)

I think the students are finally adjusting to his presence on campus they don't run away screaming anymore, they just look frightened. There have been less discipline problems on campus in the three months that he's been on campus than any time in WLU history. There are rumours of trouble brewing however, something about portable anti-tank weapons in Willison Hall.

Overall I think things are pretty well back to normal (if you can overlook the bars on the residence windows, the craters in the parking lots and twenty-four hour security camera surveillance) and the campus is gearing up for exams. I hear that Supercop is going to be dealing with anyone caught cheating on exams. With his built in voice stress analyzer it's going to be pretty tough to get away with anything but who knows.

Have a nice day and thank you for your cooperation.

I REGRET TO inform you that, contrary to popular belief, I am still dead. However, the poker game with Judge Crater, Amelia Earhart and Glenn Miller is going really well. LETTER OF THE DAY

HEY! MY name is Joe. I am now the new editor of the Atrium/Concourse/Niobe Lounge/Torque Room, taking over for everybody's favourite resume builder Alex Mur...I mean Bruised Lodges. I would like to take this opportunity to offer positions in the A/C/NL/TR. I am looking for someone to write sensible articles, take pictures, run our hockey pool, pull relevant fiction out of Reader's Digest, make lines and boxes with our vast array of magic markers and most importantly, someone to go around and collect all the old A/C/NL/TRs once they have been thrown on the floor. ALLAN
PILFERINGHAM

I finally made it home. Exams were over. The seven hour train ride was over and thank God for the alcohol that made it tolerable. I just wanted to go to bed. Ah, bed. Such a foreign luxury to the student.

Yet something had transpired in my absence while away from home. My father's footsteps echoed in the hall as he stomped towards my room. He was a rather heavy set man of forty, with a quick temper and a stubborn disposition; in my somewhat drunken state, he was the last person I wanted to deal with. Suddenly, the door swung open and, looming before me was that dark and foreboding silhouette.

"Just what the hell do you think you're doing", bellowed my father. I tried to ignore him; I thought of him as a mosquito buzzing off, but there was no avoiding him. He continued: "I've got news for you, you sorry excuse for shit!"

I turned around and waited for what was coming next. "Well, now that I've got your attention," bellowed my father, "I'd just like you to know that your mother and I are getting a divorce."

"Oh?", I asked meekly, not realizing the impact of what he had just said.

"Yeah! Well, she wanted a divorce, but I didn't want to give her one, so I killed her with the Braun coffee grinder. And by the way, the school phoned and said you failed all your courses and you can't re-apply. Your girlfriend also called and said she's pregnant, but she would never marry you because you smell bad. The dog died yesterday and you have to bury it. Your brother just admitted he's homosexual and has loved you ever since puberty. Your sister has joined a religious commune and as a condition of her acceptance, she had to donate all her records to the Grand Salami. Well, she didn't have any records, but she did give them your collection of C.D.'s. I let her take them. I never did like that music anyway. But then again, I never did like you, either. Your boss phoned and said that his Supervisor caught him for embezzlement, but he's blaming you for it. You're fired. You also have to appear in court next Tuesday. I smashed up your car just after I canceled the insurance policy. The doctor phoned and said your semen count is abnormally low, you have lung cancer and post-nasal drip. I found your stash of marijuana and sent it through the trash compactor."

With that, my father smiled a calculated smile, turned around and walked down the steps. I didn't know what to say or how to react. Well, realizing my bladder was somewhat distended, I decided I would go and relieve myself; it would give me time to figure out exactly what was going on with my life.

I reached the toilet and as I proceeded to urinate, an excruciating burning sensation filled my mid-section. When had I contracted this disease? Hopeless and confused, I sought council from a bottle of valiums in the medicine cabinet. I downed the bottle and killed myself.

Funny thing though. As I felt life slowly drain from my body, I could have sworn I heard my family yelling up to me "April Fool!"

This just in from the President's desk

I would like to start by thanking Mr. Pilferingham for allowing me to reach the students through his column. His articles are a far sight better than those of that Bill Noodle.

It has recently come to my attention that Laurier has been running a budget surplus. I would like to take this opportunity to dispell any myths regarding my management of this University and of these funds in question.

It is my sole intent to recognize and assist the student in their endeavours of higher learning. I never realized we were actually hindering their progress by taking money from them. However, in an effort to reconcile my past errs regarding the Student Body, I am extending an invitation to the entire University population to come and attend a party at my residence. Food and beverages will be provided and it will be a licenced event, so bring your I.D.

Featured entertainment will be Miss Candi Wrapper who, as I've been informed, will be providing a cake dessert as well.

My wife and I await your arrival, and look forward to your company.

Good luck on exams.
Sincerely yours,

Dr. John Weird

TROPICAL STORM DUMPS ANCIENT MONOLITHS ON LAURIER

HURRICANE JANA STRIKES

WATERLOO: In an eerie replay of the Wizard of Oz, last weeks cold front merged with hot air brewing over Stuart Lewis' office creating tropical storm Jana. Later in the week the government weather bureau upgraded the storm to full hurricane status. The terrifying hurricane's winds were gusting at over 200 miles per hour when it approached the Pacific Ocean. The immense power of the gale lifted the famous monoliths of Easter Island out of the ground and dropped them on the WLU campus killing hundreds of business students.

Among the dead was SBE Dean Dr. Alex Mudray. His body was crushed beyond recognition but ex-Atrium/resume builder Bruce Hodges identified the corpse in a most unusual way. When asked how he knew the body was Mudray's, Hodges replied "it was boots he was wearing. I knew they were his. The soles were all worn down from where I used to lick them."

Within hours of the storm's passing, WLU Administration had hollowed out the idols, installed stairs and windows, and was charging $15 for guided tours of the newly renovated monoliths. Badly needed office and classroom space will be added over the summer. Wayne Casting said "It's too bad about the students, but I guess their loss is our gain. We could even get the friends of the dead to set up a bursary or a development fund or something. Hey, maybe even I could be the Dean now!"

John Tombstone, director of student unemployment queried with "I hope this won't affect the co-op program. With the extra room for students now, I think we should boost enrollment."

Atrium takes over student publications

by: Martin "Mad-Dog" Walker

In what Economic analysts are estimating as the biggest business take-over in the history of Canada, the Atrium Newspaper was able to successfully acquire a 55% voting share of the stock of Student Publications Inc. Chris Snarkey, Editor of the Cord Weekly Newspaper at Wilfrid Laurier commented, "Holy shit! You mean that those biz-knobs are going to be up here sitting in MY office? Well we'll just see!"

The Atrium had been unsuccessful over the past six months in several take-over bids until, in what the Board of Directors claim as a shock to everyone,

President Mark Ham sold his voting rights and stock to The Atrium. Ham stated, "I needed the money...after all, I am an Arts student. Besides, I never really was fond of that guy Snarkey."

Student Publications will remain in charge of The Cord until May 1, 1990 when The Atrium will officially take control. Joke Laws, Editor of The Atrium, plans on making Dean Alex Mudray the Editor with the SBE as the Board of Directors of WLUSP. When asked to comment, Mudray blurted, "I'm God...I can do what I want. The Atrium plans on actually making a profit, something the Cord had been unable to do in past years."

Ethics?? ... Shmethics!

Peter Elgin

While most of this Money section has poked fun at the lack of ethics in the S.B.E., this article is serious and addresses the real lack of ethics in the S.B.E.

As reported in the K-W Record (29/11/89), a weapons bureaucrat from External Affairs told our Business 459 class on export marketing on November 28, that U.S. military markets still looked good for Canadian weapons producers. There was no noticeable reaction on campus either to this statement or to the fact that this official had been invited to campus to say it.

As reported in the Record (31/1/90) and the Laureate (6/2/90), WLU's 1990 outstanding business leader's award was made to the head of a local firm, 2-3% of the business of which is weapons components ('defence products') exported to the U.S. (Navy). There was no noticeable reaction on campus to this event.

On March 3, 1990, as announced by bright green and canary notices, the V.P. Marketing for Babcock & Wilcox (henceforth B-C) in Cambridge gave a talk, sponsored by Tamiae and the SBE, with the title "Penetrating the Chinese market: a 600 million dollar deal!!!" (sic). To my knowledge none of these notices were defaced or torn down (nor am I recommending that they should be so treated). The speaker did feel constrained to say something about the Tiananmen Square massacre from a business point of view. He said that the plant - which represented a joint venture between B-C and what sounded like a Chinese State Corporation - lost two days production because of the massacre, that they had to send 'our people' out of the country but only for ten days, and that some recalculation of the political risk was required. One student raised a question about the 'business ethics' involved in deciding to continue operations there. He was told B-C's decision was in line with Canadian Government policy: the government would not support enterprises that benefited the Chinese government, but this restriction would not apply to those enterprises that benefited the Chinese people. Nobody queried this distinction between the Chinese government and the Chinese people, nor in what sense such an enterprise would benefit the 'Chinese people', nor whether conformity with Canadian government policy was the appropriate criterion for making ethical business decisions, given that such policy is designed for companies such as B-C and their joint ventures. I asked whether B-C experienced any moral anxiety about dealing with a government that massacred, then further repressed, its own people, notably students. 'Yes' was the answer, but then the benefits to the people No students present expressed further concern.

...they had to send 'our people' out of the country but only for ten days, and that some recalculation of the political risk was required.

That the U.S. Government had secretly sent, within days of the massacre, senior officials to talk trade with their Chinese opposite numbers, a visit repeated a few months later, seemed to be on nobody's mind.

Nobody raised any questions when the speaker said that B-C had a similar joint venture in Djakarta, Indonesia, despite two weeks of publicity on campus about Canada's relationship to Indonesia's policy of genocide against the people of East Timor. The sign in the concourse announces Bill Ripley's hunger strike in protest against Canada's military, diplomatic and economic support for this policy. In the years following the 1975 Indonesian invasion of East Timor an estimated 200,000 of the pre-invasion population of 700,000 died from killings and forced starvation.

Despite official Canadian denials, the torture, killings and assorted other forms of repression continue to the present day. Canada has continued to supply arms to the Indonesian military, either directly, or indirectly through the United States. Since 1980 Canada has voted against repeated United Nations resolutions calling on Indonesia to withdraw from East Timor. Canadian companies have $1.4 billion of investment in Indonesia. According to Statistics Canada we are the third largest foreign investor in Indonesia after Japan and the U.S.A.. The drawing card is abundant and cheap natural resources, tax holidays, a state-controlled, strike-free and very cheap labour force, and the backing of the Canadian government in the form of export development credits and assistance from CIDA. The bulk of the investment is embodied in a giant Inco plant on the island of Sulawesi. But there are over 300 other Canadian companies operating in Indonesia or participating in joint ventures with Indonesian partners. To a list that includes Air Canada, Alcan Aluminum, Bank of Nova Scotia, Bata Shoes - that paragon of third-world exploitation, celebrated in the business pages of The Cord (29/3/90) - Westinghouse Canada, Litton Systems (Canada) and MacMillan Bloedel can now be added our very own international division of Babcock Wilcox in Cambridge. And since its conquest of the Chinese market represents a current, local and exemplary business success story, we naturally invited its V-P Marketing to campus to tell us all about it.

While students and faculty at WLU applauded the 'help' being given by a local capitalist to the 'people' of a distant land, Bill Ripley (associated with Queen's University) entered the fourth week of voluntary starvation to stop such 'help' to a similarly distant nation, 'help' that is helping to kill off one of the earth's peoples.

Unethically Spewing

by Dr. Brutal Fornication

What do steel factories, pimps, and WLU Administration have in common? They all smell really bad but make a whole lot of money. And that is exactly what business students will be learning next year in a new course offering at WLU.

Business 308, Profit Overmaximization will teach students that 'with a lack of government intervention, junk bond financing, and a keen interest in the resource industry, businesses can make huge profits by exploiting and destroying small, single industry towns' according to the 1990/91 WLU course calendar.

"The Indians that live in these towns have no idea about the rich resources right beneath their feet" says Nort Melson, course coordinator. "And better yet -- they have absolutely no concept of minimum wage".

The course makes use of the well talked about Japanese Management Styles - "You've got to get the locals on your side. If you can do that, the feds won't even know what you're doing ... let alone care." Other courses to be added to the calendar include Tax Avoidance, Labour Union Dis-membering, and The Big Mass Producing Contraceptives and Feminine Hygiene Products.

Pud Liron, in a conversation to Melson said "I sure hope there is some way we can work this course into integrated case. You know, it really shocks me, the number of holy rolling left-wing Commie pinkos we have in the S.B.E.. I actually had student last year who wanted to do P & G enviropaks for her marketing project. She tried to tell me that P & G was environmentally concerned. 'Wake up and smell the DMNA' I told her. 'It's a fad, a trend, and P & G is doing a brilliant job of capitalizing on this consumer awareness crap'."

Author of the book Environmental Degradation for Fun and Profit and WLU economics professor David Johnstone will be teaching at least one of the subjects. "I won't even be accepting pay for the honour of teaching this one. I know it goes against that capitalism stuff, but it's got to be done. I feel I should give something to the students" said Johnstone. Upon learning of this comment, S.B.E. officials promptly sacked Johnstone and froze his ass...etc..

The course offering will include field trips to Burlington, Chemical Valley and Elliott Lake. In lieu of a mid-term, students will present a new product or process that has the potential for returning profits in excess of 175% ROI. Mike Yahooey, a fourth year student commented "Great, just fucking great. Where was this course when I was in third year and had to take Business and Society because all of the other business electives were full."

Ethics Epidemic

Virus threatens existence of business student population

by Pat 'bad' B'reath

Panic is growing in the Peter's Building as a mysterious epidemic wreaks havoc. With a number of BBA students already incapacitated, the dreaded "Ethics Epidemic" seems set to decimate the business student population of Laurier.

"It's a damn shame really," comments Alex Murray, Dean of the School of Business and Economics. "You must understand however -- ethics cannot come into play in our program. Once that happens, anything goes. Ye gods ... what if the suckers, er, students, started asking questions and ... thinking. The whole BBA program could fall apart."

Biz knobs are running scared. Says one, "I'm running scared".

For those infected with "ethicitis", the future looms large and bleak. "Things are so different now, having a functioning forebrain and all.", says one former business student.

Among those BBA students who are, at present, free from all ethics, one slim hope remains. An ethics vaccine, Ethicol, has just become available. Developed by the same team that brought you Loblaw's "Green" products, the vaccine evidently immunizes against ethics, while giving the user the appearance of morality. Drove of business students are administering Ethicol to themselves -- but only, on Sundays.

SBE declares independence

by Knob 'hic' Gervin

In a referendum last week, business & economics students voted 84% in favor of separating from the rest of WLU. "They've (Art Students) been creeping into our program more and more over the past few years under the auspices of the Administration Option. It's got to stop" said SBE Dean, Dr. Alex Mudray.

The separation began in the wee hours of Sunday morning.

Appointed Marshalls from the Tamiae Executive began welding doors between the Peters Building and the Arts & Science Building shut. "They can have the the library but we're taking the business office and the mail room" said Anya Hubbahowski, Chief Marshall of the weekend's activities.

Craig Mongoose, another Marshall said "We're doing all we can to get Barry out of the Cord offices - hopefully it's not too late. We've captured four phys. ed. students and several hand weapons and we're not afraid to use either of them to get what we want".

Al Scratchmee, WLUSU president felt that "deep down in side, I knew that something like this would happen. But if I had to blame it on one person, I would have to say Spewart Lewis. Ever since he was elected, the knobs have been very anxious." A business student was over heard saying "I thought he (Stuart) was in business. I voted for him and everything. He wears ties so I just thought.... But it's exactly people like him that we have to keep out of the Peters Building. Didn't he start that recycling mumbo jumbo?"

Few Kids mania overtakes WLU

It really is Kidsomania.

For proof, check out the Centre in Tienammen Square Sunday where Few Kids On The Block will perform two sold-out shows. Failing that, there's always UW's Humanities Hall, where Few Kids play March 23.

The Chinese boys, each the only child of poverty-stricken yak farmers, got together when they realized they were the only toddlers in the neighbourhood, since the government imposed tough birth laws.

Often labeled sexist, journalists have had a field day over the homogeneous composition of the band.

Kid Limp Wang concurs.

"Well, it couldn't be helped," says Wang speaking from the Turret's spacious dressing room, "whenever a girl is born in the neighbourhood, she just seems to disappear."

As we spoke, we could hear the tumultuous roar of sex-crazed Laurier students outside. "It's nothing" says Wang, "we had 300 kids camped outside our winnebago behind Forwell's this afternoon."

Indeed, Wang, his chum Tuff Wing, Dunn Wong, Danny Wung and Donnie Weng are loving every Few Kids minute of it.

Actually, there's lots to enjoy.

The group's second album, Wangin' Tough, has sold 16 million copies on the strength of five hit singles, a sold-out tour, and a friendly barter of bodily fluids with record executives.

And insanity it is.

For instance, Wang was trying to relax alone in his 25th-floor Atlanta hotel room before a concert recently.

"I thought I heard voices," says Wang.

He had. He looked out his window in time to see 20 teenaged girls going wild in a building-under-construction close to the hotel.

"I found out later that they had paid one of the construction workers to take them up the elevator." The yellow-bellied teen raced cowardly out of the building screaming into the night.

Sounds like a hard day for Wang. But he's not complaining. "We didn't actually expect all of this," he says. "We're still pinching each other and nibbling each other's ears."

When they have time, of course. Their schedule is as hectic as their fans are happily harried.

In fact, Few Kids had to bring some of their yak farm on the road in order to take care of the fragile animals.

"They thought it was kind of funny when we tried to get them into the hotel," says Wang. "Our manager ret them glaze in the robbery. What a sight!"

What a wacky bunch. But soon they'll be gone as they tap the market mined by former teen throbs such as Wham!, The Bay City Rollers and The Monkees.

"I think it was just the light time for a group like us to come along," says Wang. "There aren't many Oriental teen groups that have whoredomness."

"Sure, we say we're from the street, but we're not hoodlums. We just grew up in a shitty environment."

"We get mothers and grandmothers coming to our shows, too. It's pretty awful having to cart them all away for dearing clack to the kidsrings."

Few Kids are on an egg roll, even if they are cautious about it.

Limp Wang of Chinese super-group The Few Kids On The Block is in town Sunday for two sold-out performances.

Johnny Deppe, Photo

"I could see how we could become conceited," Wang says. "But we're just so darn cool that we deserve to have the babes crawl all over us. We keep revel heads." While all around them, Kids' fans are losing theirs.

Children's shows arouse perversion

It's no secret that we've all noticed the prevalence of television violence, but what about those subliminal ties that slide just past our cognitive awareness? Studies by Russian psychologists have linked the climbing crime rates in North America to -- what else -- Children's shows.

First on the list was Romper Room. They reasoned that the word "Romper" was linked to rape, increased promiscuity among pre-teens, and transmission of sexual diseases. Further, they blamed Doobie for promoting excessive misuse of illegal substances. Allegations emerged that the children on the television show were actually adults with stunted growth -- a result of their drug usage from early ages. Their lethargic nature on camera was also linked to qualuludes.

Next on the list was Gumby. No reasons were given except for the fact that their creators were institutionalized after broadcast. Apparently Gumby was linked to excessive use of LSD.

Russian psychologists also attempted to make connections with Big Bird. Their reasoning was he caused severe depression in young males regarding

DOCTOR
TONGUE

TELEVISION

Sesame St.'s Bob and friend.

penis size. Aggressiveness in males was also tied to the Big Bird phenomenon. Penis envy was drawn from females who watched the show.

The Friendly Giant was believed to be the primary source of latent pedophilia and bestiality. Continually accused of violating his giraffe, broadcasters were forced to remove the show. Rusty was found to have suffered from violent and repeated acts of anal intercourse. His crushed and deformed body was found stuffed in his sock, partially burned by the fireplace.

Most puzzling though were the results drawn from Mr. Dressup. Not only was Ernie Coombs suspected of kinky cross-dressing practices, but it was recently discovered by researchers that Casey has undergone a sex change. Prior to 1984, Casey was a male. Now, if you watch the show, Casey is a female.

Religious cults in the south-western United States have recently adopted the Sesame Street theme. Playing the music backwards revealed subliminal messages provoking youth to engage in unnatural acts. In many of these cults, the Count was made grand Imperial Ultimate Superior Being. Also, the Klu Klux Klan recently adopted The Amazing Mumford as their Grand Wizard.

Something has gone awry in the CBC-PBS programming schedules. Certainly, discretion must be exercised with your children. A new move should be considered to rate children's programming in the same way movies are rated.

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles are still being investigated and reports are pending.

It seems that the Academy Award winning movie Driving Miss Daisy has been banned in Italy for "sexually explicit scenes". The censorship bureau of the government deemed the movie as not representing the public's interest and not upholding the tradition of fine Italian cinematography. Instead, the government is re-issuing an alternate version entitled "My Stud Driver's Name Is Mario". It is expected to be a steaming success.

Tammy Faye Bakker, wife of psychotic T.V. evangelist Jim Bakker, attempted suicide yesterday by chemical poisoning. Allegedly, Mrs. Bakker tried to flush her head down the toilet when her mascara and make-up mask began to dissolve. She was found hours later by live-in boyfriend Fred Savage (of "WONDER YEARS" fame) and was admitted to St. Mary's of the Useless Miracle Hospital. She is expected out pending psychiatric analysis and facial treatment.

Las Vegas entertainer Sammy Davis Jr., known for his radical changes of religious faith, has recently joined Nazi Skinhead organization The National Front. Davis was seen at a swanky Vegas eatery wearing cherry Doctor Martins and red suspenders. When pressed on the issue, Davis screamed "Get outta my face you pinko commie swine!".

Stallone and Elvis on-the-town.

On a lighter note, it seems that Sylvester Stallone left Brigitte Nielson for a new love after all! Inside reporters have found Sly spending an unusually lengthy amount of time with Elvis Presley. It seems that The King is alive and well and living in Sylvester's pleasure palace. Insiders report that Sly has been showering the rock and roll legend with expensive toiletries and dresses. The King and Sly were recently seen at a soiree featuring Wayne Newton where The King was dressed in a stunning moon stone leisure suit while Sly was sporting a gold lame dress. It is rumored that the two may be starring in a movie together based on the life and times of Liza Minelli.

For video buffs, Rob Lowe will be releasing seventeen hours of never before seen home videos. They will be available May 1 at all available K-Mart stores with a purchase of over $6.

METAL MUSEUM

By Snake Wilkins
Laurier Sun

Paris, Ontario is the new home for the World Heavy Metal Hall of Fame, Paris Mayor Lionel Hampton announced yesterday.

"The town has long been a haven for smelly, greasy, ill-dressed slob," Hampton said, "It was just about time we made it official."

Members of Heavy Metal bands Accept, Slayer, and Rick Astley were on hand for the celebrations following the Mayor's edict.

Surprisingly, the townspeople of Paris are eager to have the museum built. The sooner the slime get off the street and into a building where they can be controlled and, God willing, cured the better, they feel.

No site has been allocated for the Complex yet, but in the interim, works and memorabilia will be housed in that last bastion of good taste, the Paris District High School.

PDHS student Snatch Dunamn was very pleased with the town's decision. "It's right on, man!", he growled. "Maybe now we can get some fuckin' eh bands in here and clear out those poncy mod fags from the junior hall."

Also in the bidding for the location was Aylmer, canned vegetable capitol of Ontario. The committee were not satisfied with the town's atmosphere, deciding to go with the walking vegetables rather than the preserved kind.

U2 drummer goes solo

DUBLIN (IP) Larry Mullen Jr., drummer for popular Irish rock band U2, announced today that he will be pursuing a solo career during the band's recent "leave-of-absence" from recording.

The project is Mullen's "most ambitious work yet," the drummer said and is set to feature such gifted musicians as Ringo Starr, Rush's Neil Peart, Phil Collins, Bill Bruford, and the late John Bonham.

Mullen acts as "overseer and guide" to the recording and says that his contribution can be heard in a daring tambourine solo on the album's lead track. No tour dates have been announced.

Blind rocker wins law suit

OTTAWA (CP) -- One of the strangest law suits in rock history is drawing to a finish.

Blind Toronto guitarist Jeff Healey emerged from the courtroom today victorious following a lengthy suit with his manager and ICU Concert Promoters.

Healey filed the suit in September, 1989 after learning that a concert which he was led to believe he performed at the Toronto Skydome actually had him appearing in front of a half-dozen students at Wilfrid Laurier University's student bar The Turret.

"If I had known I was playing there," Healey said, "I would never have bothered. There's a big difference between 60,000 adoring fans and a handful of pissed-up football players".

Keith Donaldson of WLUSTU testified that the promoter told him to place microphones in front of the two populated tables in front of the stage to emulate the effect of a large crowd. When Healey asked for the Skydome roof to be opened, Donaldson was told to bluff it by rotating a large fan above the performer.

Although Healey had a backup band whose members each had 20/20 vision, they were all pardoned from the conspiracy on grounds of plain stupidity.

Healey said that he was embarrassed and ashamed, thinking that he had played the concert of his career. "Those assholes really pulled the wool over my eyes", the singer said in closing.

Guitarist Jeff Healey.

MYLES A MAN?

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) Canadian singer Allannah Myles is cruising up the U.S. charts with her debut album but a scandal may mean the end of her career.

A plastic surgeon from Burnaby, B.C. claims that the curvacious Canadian is the product of the most cunningly successful sex-change operation ever seen.

Myles, Dr. Sven Robertson claims, is really MuchMusic VJ Christopher Ward who mysteriously went missing just as Myles album was released.

MuchMusic/City TV mogul Moses Znaimer stated that Ward is on sabbatical concentrating on his song-writing.

Viewers of Ward's video show City Limits constantly wrote in to the show complaining that the VJ was a little light in the loafers.

A MuchMusic insider said that Ward confided that he was so frustrated that he could never make it in the music business as a man. "All these babes are making it big because they show a little leg," the insider claimed Ward said, "Well, I'll show them. I'll show them all!"

Myles would not comment on the operation but her discreet groin-scratching and muffled burp gave her away.

Paula Abdul chases pussy

LOS ANGELES (AP) Singer/dancer/choreographer Paula Abdul is embroiled in charges laid by Los Angeles police regarding the strangest case of bestiality in history.

Muffin, known to Abdul's fans simply as 'the cat' in her latest hit video "Opposites Attract", claims that the singer seduced him and forced him into engaging in unspeakable acts with her. The cat is devastated and claims that he will never work with a human being again.

On the stand today the Cat, nicknamed 'Muff' by Abdul, broke down and told the court about their clandestine meetings.

The Cat said that Abdul was turned on by having a sexual partner who could lick his own privates.

Abdul would only comment that her old boyfriend, Arsenio Hall, could do that also.

THE SWAN LAKE ACCORD

Frustrated WLU Music students take 15 hostages in Student Union Building

By Hanz und Franz Fontaine
Laurier Sun

Hordes of militant music students stormed the Student Union Building earlier this morning. After gaining control of the building, the mutinous organization calling themselves the FLT (Front de la Liberation de Tchaikovsky), presented the WLU administration with their demands.

The group, not to be confused with a deli-sandwich, stated that in order to be a part of the WLU community, specific changes would have to be made in the Student Government. Of their numerous demands, five were of particular importance to the students. These include:

1. Recognition of the Aird Center as a distinct musical entity. This would protect them from the tyranny of the Business-oriented faculties.
2. Opting out of the athletic complex fee. Since jocks don't appreciate good music, why should Music students support athletics.

3. Arias will be the official working language of the Aird center.

4. One third of all WLUSTU BOD members are to be chosen from a list submitted by the Music Students Association.

5. One mandatory music theory course for all new FROSH entering WLU hereafter.

If compliance to these demands are not met within 24 hours, the FLT threatens to throw one WLUSTU member out of the Turret into the Quad. They will continue eliminating WLUSTU hostages, one every hour, until demands are met. Executions will be carried out under the strains of Tchaikovsky's 1812 overture.

Upon learning of this takeover, students began Jump chants. Echoes of "Toss the assholes", could be heard at U of W. Additional acts of student support included the placement of sharpened spikes into the Quad, and burning of gel-covered effigies of prominent WLUSTU staff.

When asked for comment, Dr. J. Weird replied: "FLT? Oh, O.K., but hold the mayo."

Irate Music students fend off the administration during S.U.B. Takeover.

Wayne Newton Exposed

The truth has finally come out. During a closed press conference yesterday, Las Vegas demi-God Wayne Newton announced to a shocked group of reporters that it was not really him singing his smash hit and trade mark, Danke Schoen, but his "pet doggy Petey."

This bizarre revelation was followed by Newton lapsing into several minutes of imitating his dog and a lengthy explanation of the original recording session.

"He's such a cute doggy. Aren't you Petey? Ruffthankyouforallthejoyand-painbowwow. You'll really like him once you get to know him, I'm sure you will. Ruff," said Newton schizophrenically.

His publicist later released that Newton was in for tests at the Barky Ford Clinic.

THEY'RE CUTE, BUT TROUBLE

Bugged By Drunks Visiting Balcony

KITTY

All About Animals

DEAR KITTY:

Do you know of any way to keep drunks off an apartment balcony? In the warm weather I like to keep my balcony door open to enjoy the evening breeze but I don't want to have to feed an army. They're cute and all, and some of them are even my friends, but you have to draw the line somewhere.

-- Not a pizzeria

DEAR NOT A PIZZERIA:

You're right. Drunks, friends or not, may be cute but they're also a strain on the budget. They're also a persistent species, being mostly wild as opposed to domesticated. Food is not so much a problem, as they're probably the only ones who'll eat your leftover KD and spam.

Far worse is a disoriented drunk tearing around an apartment, knocking over things and climbing the walls. If that should happen, close all doors but the one it got in through and stay well out of the way. Eventually, the creature will find its way out again. Never try to corner it, you'll find it has a nasty bite.

Make your balcony an inhospitable place by noisily shooing away any squirrel you see, and don't put any food out in cold weather (feed them in the bar instead). If the rascals persist, have a heavy-duty screen door installed.

DEAR KITTY:

In January, I acquired a first year roommate. I took him to Health Services since I noticed his eyes (originally brown) turned grey, he only answered "affirmative", "negative" or "does not compute" to anything I asked, and his head began to take on a general block-ish shape.

Since it definitely wasn't a cold or a case of pregnancy, there was nothing Health Services could do for him.

I'm at the end of my rope. Is it just me, or do all first years byte?

-- Troubled About Chip Percy Unter

DEAR TROUBLED:

Sounds like a definite case of the computer bug going around. The victim becomes literally so backlogged with data that he physically begins to look and act like an overloaded computer. In a sense, Chip bit off more than he could process.

Computeritis is a serious disease that could become terminal. The only way to debug Chip is to reprogram him as a student. There are several places on campus you could take him to: Computing Services, UT&T, the Library. There are off campus professionals as well, but they're rather on the expensive side.

If all else fails, try giving him a boot.

DEAR KITTY:

Doing some spring cleaning this weekend, I noticed that the dust bunnies that took refuge from the cruel winter winds underneath my bed had had a productive season. They multiplied and now I am the proud, if somewhat dubious, owner of two hundred and twenty-seven feisty dust bunnies. They're nice pets -- quiet and affectionate -- but they tend to induce nightmares uncomfortably reminiscent of Australia. Unfortunately, no student is a continent and neither is my bedroom. There's just not enough space for them all. At this rate, I'll have (227)! by the time next spring rolls around.

My only concern is what to do with the bunnies. I can't bear to think of them waiting in the Humane Society to be sucked up by a callous, cold-blooded vacuum cleaner if nobody adopts them. Also, how can I stop them from multiplying so I can continue my yearly spring cleaning ritual without fear.

-- Hare-ied on Albert St.

DEAR HARE-IED:

If you don't want to relinquish your problems to the Humane Society, the best thing to do is to make dust bunnies a novelty pet, much like rats were a few years ago. Who would want to own a dust bunny, you ask? Well, it's a matter of product differentiation. Dust bunnies are quiet, easy to care for, undemanding in terms of attention, affectionate and require very little cost. Using a price skimming method, you could probably pawn them off at $47.95 each, netting you $10,884.65 (no costs to account for). This would put you through another year at Laurier. As for next spring, consider cleaning early, just in time for a nice relaxing Reading Week somewhere down south. The possibilities are endless, all it takes is a little entrepreneurial spirit and a lot of connections. Remember, there's one born every second.

Please address any animal queries or comments to me, Kitty, at The Laurier Sun.

Dust bunnies may make cute pets, but they infringe upon already cramped living quarters. [Ed.'s note: See related story on cramped living quarters pg. 29.]

BITCHFORD

Aw, Dust Bunnies! Another bitchy day in the neighbourhood

Did you ever wake up in the morning and have the desire to bitch at everything? Happens to me everyday (that's how I earn my living).

It's not my fault, everything just seems to happen to me, and I'm going to share what would be a sleep-inducing anecdote at any dinner table with the whole of Metro Laurier in a vain attempt to bring some sort of meaning to my otherwise drab life.

I wake up in the morning and my radio station is staticky so I have to listen really hard to the news instead of just letting it filter through my sleepy ears.

I get stuck on the toilet with no toilet paper and the nearest roll is in the closet outside the door.

I go to find some clean underwear in my drawer and there's none left.

Life's a bitch, isn't it?

So, I'm on my way to school and I realize as I'm five minutes away from my house and fifteen minutes away from school that I've forgotten my you-know-whats.

I get to school and I go to get a coffee from the coffee lady in the Concourse and I burn my tongue on the scalding liquid.

And people wonder why I bitch.

As I was saying, even the smallest things can ruin what would have otherwise been a good day in a good week in a good month of a good year of a miserable goddamned life.

But on to other things. Like The Boy.

He is the center of my universe, my reason for being, but I can bitch about him too. As I do, and how.

He never knows exactly what I'm thinking or feeling, and that bugs me. It's like he'll look at me like I'm crazy when I tell him to leave me alone because I'm in a really bitchy mood.

I don't know, maybe I just can't deal with things, but when I have to write these columns with deadlines that give no consideration to my schedule at all, that makes me bitchy.

If you don't like today's column, don't come bitchin' to me.

"NEVER MIND THE BUTTOCKS"

By ALLAN LEE
Laurier Sun

"Never mind the buttocks, Grovelling", was the phrase Athletic Director Rich Newbrough barked to hockey coach Wayne Grovelling last week in the inferiority Complex.

Our trusty and snoopy Laurier Sun reporter and reformed security/flashlight ace Al Lee overheard those very words in a conversation outside of Highbrough's office between Grovelling and the Big Jocko over an incident that happened at last week's Athletic banquet. The phrase, a variation of a once used album cover by the famed Sex Pistols, was directed at Grovelling over a few words he uttered towards the females in attendance during a pre-awards speech. He said to the whole crowd that there were some "pretty fine looking ladies here tonight".

Grovelling who could not be reached for comment, was also heard outside his office by Lee saying that he would have said "I wonder what they look like under those dresses, but that would have been too much I think and may have upset a few people--maybe". Lee thought that he saw Grovelling talk to some of his players at the time in his office but couldn't verify who exactly Grovelling was talking to.

"You never know what you'll hear walking outside peoples' offices at the A.C. I just love it. Sometimes you can tell the coaches outside that you aren't from the paper and quote them anyway---just great," said an elated Lee.

"Yep...I would say Al is my best reporter judging by what he digs up. Ya sure his eye is still a little blurry and he can't move his left hand all the way from the last time Highbrough got his football players to beat the shit out of him, but he has to learn you just can't get caught snooping outside some ones' office---he's learned," said Sun Sports Editor Owen Highlife.

Highbrough said in an interview with Lee over the incident. "You know one day Waynes' going to say something really stupid and I am not going to be there to bail him out. I love the guy but hell, does he ever get me in trouble sometimes, like the time with the cheerleaders...oh scratch that, Wayne wouldn't want me to tell you that one." When asked about the relation to the Sex Pistols album cover and Grovelling, Highbrough just said, "Well hell, I was just listening to 'God Save the Queen' from the 'Pistols in my office and I guess that was the first thing on my mind when I was talking to Ringo...wasn't really anything. Hey how did you know about that."

Hev, its almost off...

Curly, Lemon, 'Trot' Back From Drugs

By DIETER BROCK
Laurier Sun

Due to their outstanding performance this season against the Washington Generals, the Harlem Globetrotters have received a bid into next year's NCAA basketball tournament, officials said Tuesday. The Globetrotters sported a incredible 110 wins-5 losses throughout the 1989-1990 season while touring to over forty countries.

Official word reached the players early Wednesday morning in India where they are set to begin a three-week stint in that country's major towns and villages.

The team will be led by returning veterans Meadowlark Lemon and Curly Neal who have both recently come out of rehabilitation from drug and alcohol dependencies. Both of the players had found themselves in financial trouble and decided that another year with the team would be beneficial.

"One of them things might be difficult to handle is the orange basketball," Meadowlark stated. "Wees' all used to playing with them groovy red, white and blue balls. Shit, I guess wees gonna have ta play hard."

Problems facing the Globetrotters include two female players who are currently on the roster and playing in third world countries. Head coach Barney Rubble said that both Caroline 'Sweet Thighs' Phillips and Nadine 'Chesty' Watson are valuable assets to the team and great in bed.

"What comes to mind is the great cult film of the 1970's 'Fast Break' with the academy award winning actor Abe Kaplan where Abe was faced with the same problem I am. He had a female player on his team who played a key role in winning the state championship," said Rubble. "What she did to avoid being discovered was tape her breasts down before every game. I haven't discussed it with Caroline and Nadine yet, but I'm sure they won't object."

Asked about the third world games, Lemon replied; "We know it smells and everyone's poor, but we, the Globetrotters, will give the people a chance to forget about their problems for a while." The team has sent out a warning to the other sixty-three teams travelling to New Orleans next year: "We have guns and aren't afraid to use them". UNLV, watch out!

GEORGE'S GROSS-OUTS

Corporate Sports Editor

Spitting, sweat, sumo wrestling are really gross

This week's Gross-Out's come from around the wide world of sports.

You know what I find is really gross... at the Maple Laff Gardens---the sticky floor on your way to the can. Last week while covering the Laffs at The Nude House of Wacky Hockey Laffs, I had to make a deposit in the trough in the men's room. Well on my way my feet got so sticky that I had to stop and clean them off with a napkin. Much to my chagrin, there was a whole plethora of filth tacked on the bottom of my shoes, everything from those little plastic things that you stir your coffee with to somebody's half eaten hot dog. I was grossed out, but didn't waste the opportunity to enjoy a freebie courtesy of my fellow hockey fan, I ate it and used the stir stick for my coffee....

The hockey players who spit and blow their nose on the ice with the camera pointed at them...you know with one finger on one nostril like the good old boys do on the farm...Major League Baseball players who scratch their groins while at the plate during an afternoon broadcast on national t.v...do they have some sort of crabs or something?...Watching baseball players spit chewing tobacco at the plate...Having to watch people wipe the sweat off of the basketball court during a cut in the action at an NBA game...who carries those towels around after the wiping and what do they do with them? They dry off the counters at the concession stand where you put your arms to rest...European soccer players who practically make love to fellow players after scoring a goal...what are they sexually repressed or do they just love the smell of each other? In the 1988 Olympics at Seoul, Korea watching Ben Johnson's and Carl Lewis's armadillos shaking in their shorts while they run. Women's volleyball shorts...old lady's underwear or what?

Changing at the annual triathalons...stripping down to 'How's your Father' right beside their equipment, er.. bikes.

Gross Out of the Week: Sumo Wrestling...sweaty disgusting slobs belly-bucking each other wearing only leather padded g-strings. Gross!!!

That concludes this week's gross-outs, see you next week for another edition of George's Gross Outs.

Next Week: The Animal Kingdom. Animals that have been squashed on our nation's highways and byways and the consequences to young children's sports.

NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE

NORDIQUES WIN CUP!

By THE BROWN DOG
Laurier Sun

HOCKEY NOTEBOOK

APRIL 4: Toronto wins their opener 1-0 over St. Louis when Brad Marsh converted on a tic-tac-toe passing play with John Kordic and Brian Curran. Leafs coach Doug Carpenter, unable to decide which of his three netminders to play, opted to dress all three and rotate them at 5 minute intervals, often having them change on the fly. The success of this plan prompted other teams to do likewise.

APRIL 5: Just before their game with the Hartford Whalers, the Boston Bruins announced that they had traded their Adams Division title to the Quebec Nordiques for a third-rounder in '94.

APRIL 8: Chicago's Dave "Charlie" Manson goes an entire game without getting in a fight. Chicago loses anyway as Helmut Balderis rifles home a hat-trick in leading his charges to a 3-2 win.

APRIL 11: Buffalo's Rick Vaive and Mike Foligno go missing before game four versus Montreal. Nobody cares.

APRIL 13: Washington's Dino Ciccarelli engages in a wild stick-swing incident with Viacheslav Fetisov, Aleski Kasatonov, and Sergei Starikov of the Devils. The bloody incident, which saw the four receive a total of 729 stitches, was hailed by Don Cherry as "the best thing that's happened to hockey in ten years." Ciccarelli claimed the Russkies were "picking on me, I had to do something." No penalties were assessed as referee Kerry Fraser was busy fixing his hair at the time keeper's bench and missed the whole affair.

CHECK POINTS

MAY 8: In the Campbell Conference final, the Toronto Maple Leafs completed their sweep of the Winnipeg Jets as Tie Domi did all the scoring in a 3-0 Toronto win. The Leafs had still not allowed a goal against at this point, and Tom Fergus led the league with a +/- rating of +21 in eight games.

MAY 15: In game seven of the Wales Conference finals, Quebec ousted the Islanders despite a strong series by noted New York goal scorer Mick Vukota. This game saw a lengthy centre-ice tag-team battle as Pat Lafontaine and Hubie McDonough were manhandled by Guy Lafleur and Paul Romanuk, who was recently picked up from the TSN Tornados of the Global Hockey League.

THE FINALS: Well, I suppose you all remember this one clearly. The seven game series between Toronto and Quebec saw every single game go into overtime, with player/coach Robbie Ftorek eventually netting the cup winner. The series has been revered world-wide as the greatest hockey ever played. One small consolation for the Leafs was Brian Curran picking up three assists in the final game to edge out the Nordiques Darin Kimble in the playoff scoring race.

MAY 31: In yet another questionable move by Quebec management, the Nordiques traded the Stanley Cup to Los Angeles for $100 and the rights to Barry Beck.

Whatever. See you next year.

ROUGH RIDE IN CFL.

CFL president Al Bundy has reported that some changes have to be made before the 1990-1991 CFL season begins. When questioned about his actions Bundy replied that time was needed to come up with a new name for the football franchise in Ottawa. It was brought to Bundy's attention that there is a team out west with the same name. Al Bundy has suggested that the team be renamed the King Kong Bundys due to the recent acquisition of many ex-members of the World Wrestling Federation. The CFL board of directors has not made any final decisions as of yet.

HAWK TRADES COOPS.

The beloved Wilfrid Laurier Golden Hawk mascot handed in his resignation last week after allegations that the Hawk had been moonlighting as the St. Aigle Bleu's Restaurant Chicken. The Hawk declined to answer to the charges and has since flown off to Moncton, New Brunswick.

GUM ORGASM

A spokesperson for the O-GEE-WHIZ baseball card company has stated that warnings will be placed on all baseball card packets issued after May 1st, 1990. Bobby Stewart, one of the company's chief scientists has recently discovered that the pink gum included in all packets is both addictive and may lead to pregnancy and forms a milky paste around the lips after chewing.

Chicago Bulls forward Michael Jordan was found after missing from the NBA team for nearly three weeks. Jordan turned up 30 miles off the coast of Cyprus in what team officials called a 'really weird situation.' Jordan who was on vacation disappeared flying over the Bermuda Triangle and will report to the New York Islanders farm team in Indianapolis in the IHL for conditioning. Center Pat Lafontaine will join the Bulls in Jordan's place.

Boston Bruins have acquired Vancouver Canucks forward Trevor Linden for a slow and old center.

New HOMES

Thinking of moving? You're not alone. The growing trend at Laurier seems to be the "move up" buyer, the home renter seeking larger, more luxurious and comfortable housing.

While her locker is not somewhere she'd be ashamed to bring friends to, it's "getting a bit on the overcrowded side" Josephina Student admits.

Joe Student (no relation to Josephina) echoes the sentiment as he desperately tries to shove his couch/bed back into his locker. "Last year I lived in a half-locker. I don't know how I did it. Now I find even a full locker is just not enough."

When asked where he will go, Student (Joe) shrugs and mysteriously says he has to check out his options before committing himself.

Not a paper to let sleeping students lie, the Laurier Sun delved further to discover an Underground Housing Office of Ontario (UHOO) located in a secret location. Being sworn to secrecy, I cannot reveal the whereabouts of the office. Suffice it to say, it exists. Besides, I was blindfolded.

Under the guise of a despondent home seeker, I obtained some facts and figures and even managed to smuggle some photos and descriptions of luxury housing at Laurier.

Did you know that 102% of Laurier's population is dissatisfied with their present living quarters and wish to upgrade their situation. But, naturally, with students the number one concern is that of cost. With the UHOO system, however, money is not an object or even a factor.

Most places obtained through UHOO involve minimal to no cost. There's only the finder's fee, which varies with the risk and location factors.

So take a look below and if you find anything you like, contact your UHOO agent. But hurry, places are going fast and you don't want to get stuck at Cockroach Towers for another year.

WLU STUDS UNITE OFFICES

Location: 2nd floor of the Studs Unite Building
Rent: Must do a bit of work for WLUSU, i.e. head a committee, do some volunteer work; best offices (view- and space-wise) if elected president or vice-president.

Risk: Very nominal, just pretend to be a keener [Ed.'s note: you could even win a Volunteer's Award doing this!].

Perks: Free coffee and spring water.

WLU STUDS PUB OFFICES

Location: 2nd floor of the Studs Unite Building
Rent: Must do a bit of work for WLUSP, i.e. type some copy in, cut and paste, tell everyone your views on any topic especially if they don't want to know them; again best offices if hired to a position -- but this requires too much work and they're so laid back up there they'd never know.

Risk: None, just act like you belong there and everyone will just assume you come with the place, like the furniture and the computer terminals.

Perks: Use of refrigerator (featured in foreground), free pizza Tuesday nights (as long as you can run faster than the photo department).

TV LOUNGE

Location: 2nd floor of Studs Unite Building
Rent: Forced to watch all Soap Operas, Talk Shows and Game Shows. No other expenses.

Risk: None, since no one can challenge your right to be here: this is the only 24 hour place designated by Laurier.

Perks: Comfortable chairs, all day TV (eventually you will control what everyone else has to watch), everyone comes to visit you, close to restroom facilities and the Games Room.

UNDERGROUND TUNNELS

Location: Between buildings.
Rent: Must wait until after 10 pm (nightclasses) to hang out at home. Other than that, no cost involved.

Risk: Medium, since cleaning staff may become suspicious. They operate between 11:22 and 11:47 pm so take a washroom break then.

Perks: You'll love in when it's raining cuz it's the only basement apartment you'll ever get that doesn't flood or get damp. Lots of space, minimal furniture (you may have to rent a locker for clothes and other essentials).

By Ace Auerback

HOW TO ABUSE YOUR CHART:

Locate your month of birth. The dots on each graph highlight your bioreject readouts. Check the scales on the left or right for your Intellectual, Emotional, and Physical factors.. From 1 to 5. Add these three numbers to determine what degree of a Bioreject you are.

BIO RE JEX READOUT:

0-5 Loser Cycle-

Go back to bed! Nothing will go right today. You discover $50 you thought you'd lost only to find your bank account is overdrawn by $200.

5-10 O.K Cycle-

Things are looking up! Don't worry that new venture will probably fail but at least you won't lose everything and have to pan-handle like last time.

11-15 Outstanding Cycle-

Very little is needed to prove, you've graduated ... to solid foods. Congratulations come from all your university peers.

PENDING MONSOON!

TONIGHT: 73% chance of sunset.

TOMORROW: Sun may rise sometime during the day, if we're lucky. Too hard to predict now, we'll be able to tell sometime next week.

SATURDAY: Might be sunny. Might be raining. Then again, it may snowstorm. How about hail, haven't had that one for a while.

SEX

It is a good thing, this sex, this scrogging
It is more fun than jogging or logging!
We seek it here, we seek it there,
This glorious meshing of pubic hair,
This divine intermingling of organs and lips,
This fiery lust that rocks our hips.
Even if the bed squeaks and creaks,
We could go for weeks and weeks,
Till virgin roommates and friends complain
That too much screwing has warped our brains.
It really is a lot of fun,
Even with a big thick old condom.
