Dr. Rosehart Reassigned

Chocoholic President gets punked off; replaced by Publicator Pearce

DISCORD BULLSHIT
ASSMANGO KAY

As the year ends, the administrative level of the University has been thrown into flux by surprise hiring and firings. Current University President Dr. Robert Rosehart has been given his walking orders only months after being confirmed for a second five-year term as President. His scheduled replacement is outgoing Wilfrid Laurier University Student Publications President Christian K. Pearce.

According to the secretary pool on the second floor of the Peter's Building, Rosehart's demise was directly connected to his aggressive courting of the mini Easter eggs kept at the Reception desk.

"If he hadn't been so piggish about things, it would have been alright," lamented Rosehart's secretary Beth Harrison. "I tried to get him on the Choco-Patch, but he would have none of it!"

With Rosehart copping all the candies, the Board of Governors was left with little choice other than to fire him.

"There was no other option - he was killing our chocolate budget," explained Board Chair Jim Beingessner. "Fortunately, that's not a concern with the new fellow. I mean, he IS chocolate!"

Upon hearing the news, Rosehart seemingly had a nervous breakdown. He first ransacked the Peter's Building, looking for the sweet dark goodness. When WLUSU VP: Finance Eddy Schall couldn't be found, he instead stole the remaining Easter Eggs on the floor.

The crazed President then ran through the secret passageway connecting his office to the Dining Hall storeroom where his rampage continued. Boxes of Kit-Kats were torn open and crates of Kinder Eggs destroyed in the President's chocoholic frenzy.

WLU Security was called in and a two-hour standoff ensued. Rosehart menaced the officers with plastic Kinder toys, prompting Security to call in Foot Patrol as backup. Driven to the brink of insanity by repeated shouts of "Code Two-Four! Code Two-Four!" an emotionally drained, chocolate-stained Rosehart finally emerged into the custody of the WLU Constables, who promptly clubbed him to the ground. Once secured in the BACCHUS drunk tank, Rosehart had time to reflect on his situation. "This is...shocking. I can't believe that I'm being fired," muttered the stunned President.

As the reality of the situation sunk in, Rosehart quickly moved from shock to anger. "That beak-nosed vermin Rowland [Smith, VP: Academic] must be behind this! I'll clip his arrogant little accent for it!"

Pearce, for his part, was mainly left out of the controversy. Having won the student election for his position by a huge majority over a year ago, he had maintained his popularity in spite of the idiotic and controversial antics of his newspaper editor Asad Kuyani.

By creating fictional entities like "accountability policies" and "review boards" Pearce had pacified the teeming masses calling for Kuyani's head for most of the year.

His recent firing of Kuyani cemented his candidacy to replace Rosehart.

"When he fired that ignorant editor of his, he showed us that he had the ruthless, callous, self-interested nature needed to succeed at the highest level," said Beingessner.

"We weren't sure he was ready for it until he took Kuyani's head to the chopping block - that took some big balls."

Still, the relatively green Pearce still needs some polishing before he can assume the position.

"There's no way we're going to let some little punk with hair come in here and start bossing us around," declared Smith.

"He won't have the full respect of the administration until he starts going bald like the rest of us."

"He's definitely got to do something about that hair," agreed Beingessner.

"You can't get anywhere at Laurier unless you're going bald. I mean, look at that Kroeker kid who keeps busting our balls about computers and stuff. At least he showed us some respect and lost some hair."

Pearce himself didn't see what all the hubbub was about.

"Man, I'm befuddled by this bombastic precipitous contrivance that evidently is propelling my astutely adroit persona into the permanent performance position of Presidentialness," said Pearce.

"It's all good though - I'll just drop some sweet-ass rhymes on their wack backs: 'Cracking while I'm macking/flexing while I'm sexing/officiating the rules on all you fools as you tools through school.'"

Pearce's credentials for the job seem solid. He's been pursuing his undergraduate degree since the late 1980's. The only reason he hasn't finished that yet, he claims, is his pursuit of "the fly honies."

His appointment, however, has brought resentment from some quarters of campus.

"I've been here just as long as he has and I'm still stuck babysitting these residence kids," fumed Residence Life Staffer Joel Lynn, former WLUSU President.

Another former WLUSU President was no less impressed.

"I didn't stick around here just to watch a bunch of god-damn photocopiers! I want his job," cried HUB Manager Devin Grady.

"I'm sick of sorting paper and envelopes! I deserve to be President again! Or at least running a friggin' Kinko's!"

Dining agreement

Renovations for next three years

DAVID FIELD
MATTHEW CADE

In spite of a difference of opinion over the ongoing issue of dining hall expansion, the Student Services Activity Council and University administration came to an agreement last Friday when student representatives from the SSAC voted the proposal through, 11-3.

According to President Bob Rosehart, each side relaxed the demands they had originally made.

"We each gave a little," said Rosehart. "They backed off of (placing a tax on) cash sales, and I backed off the $100 cap (on all meal plans)."

Instead, the money that is to go toward dining hall renovations will come from a 5% charge on all residence meal plans. Without the proposed cap, Rosehart has suggested that more revenue may be generated by the plan, and therefore the amortization payments will be reduced.

Having secured several guarantees before showing his support for the agreement, Students' Union President Jeffrey Kroeker was also satisfied with the outcome.

"No one got exactly what they wanted," said Kroeker. "However, we received significant assurances for weekend food operations and a detailed consultation process."

Where is everyone? Perhaps they're all dead...

As well, Rosehart has made a commitment to students that the university will not seek additional money for food services on campus for the life of the amortization. For the next three years, the maximum increase in residence fees would be equal to the increase in the Consumer Price Index.

"At the end of the day, students will have a better facility," said Kroeker. "Not just for food services, but health and counseling as well."

Vice President of Finance, Robert Byron, concurred.

"The renovations will be able to accommodate a greater number of students, offer a greater selection of food, and will help to keep costs down."

The next step for organizers is the planned completion of an extension to the Student Services building. This will include an enhancement of both health and counseling services.

The addition and actual physical expansion of the dining hall and Paul Martin Centre is to be completed in the Fall and Winter of 2001 and 2002. The two level renovation will provide more seating space downstairs for dining patrons, and will create a larger executive meeting area upstairs.

Also, Rosehart has suggested that more room will be provided for students to study. The plan is to install wireless internet access for Laurier students who wish to use their notebook computers in the designated area.

The improvements to the kitchen will be made next summer.

Although Rosehart has said that "the project is basically in go-mode," there still exists no satisfactory contract with Aramark. Furthermore, someone still needs to design all of the renovations.

The Concourse renovations were a problem last summer, but Rosehart insists that student services will not be nearly as massive a job.

Union donation

DILLON MOORE

"We must take every opportunity that is given to us to meet the needs of the students. Now is the time to invest, we should wait no longer."

This was the message that Students' Union Board member Paul Tambeau eagerly announced at a press conference, as the Union unveiled their initiative to donate $100,000 to Health & Wellness programs on campus.

The announcement, during which both Tambeau and Union President Jeffrey Kroeker spoke, took place yesterday in the WLUSU Boardroom in front of various members of the Board of Directors and the Students' Union Executive.

The Students' Union is able to make this donation thanks to surpluses from its health plan operation. Under the leadership of Tambeau and Paul Beingessner, the Health Plan Review Committee spent the last month finalizing their decision on how to deal with the surplus.

As Kroeker noted at the conference, Laurier is one of the only Universities in the country with a health plan that is self-insured. Being self-insured means that Health Services operates under the auspices of the Students' Union, the Graduate Students Association and the University through the Student Services Protocol Agreement. It splits the funding and management responsibilities of all student services and has been held up as a model of student/administration co-operation.

Over the past few years, the Health Services department has turned a profit, resulting in a surplus that Tambeau says totals about $246,000. The donation, then, will leave roughly $146,000 in the coffers of Health Services. Advisors to the Health Plan Review Board suggested that at least $100,000 be left in the account to cover any unforeseen disasters or health emergencies, such as a full inoculation of Laurier students.

The donation itself will be kept under the discretion of the Students' Union. They have decided to distribute the money only to those projects that are successfully applied for and reviewed by the board.

The criteria for the donation specify a Health & Wellness proposal, that will enhance services on campus and be a one-time allocation of funds. Additional rules for the distribution of the money can be found in the application sheet itself.

The Students' Union has already pledged to donate a significant sum of money to the building of the Student Services Building expansion, and the idea of this donation was to coincide with that project. This additional money will fund those things that people felt would enhance Health Services, but were not in the budget. The money is not meant to go toward the building, but rather toward features that could be within it.

The interested parties will have to rush to get their applications considered. The proposals are due by April 11th, and a decision on funding will be made by the 23rd. This short timeline ensures that the funding decisions will remain under the control of those Union members who spearheaded this initiative to begin with.

Investing in students

DAVID FIELD

20 March 2001 the Government of Ontario's Investing in Students Task Force released its report entitled Portals and Pathways: A Review of Postsecondary Education in Ontario.

The main claim made by the report is that Ontario's Colleges and Universities are currently using government money efficiently; any additional savings through efficiency has to come from the system, not the individual institutions.

According to WLU President Robert Rosehart the report puts down criticism of the Ontario Colleges and Universities. "[The Ontario Government] needs to look at [providing] more money," said Rosehart.

WLU Vice President of Finance Robert Byron added that this report destroys the popular perception that universities are inefficient. Universities had to become well managed because of the reduced government funding continued Byron.

The report also advocates greater cooperation among the institutions to not only create easier transfer for students but also the greater offering of a combined degree/diploma.

Dr. Rosehart expressed concerns over this part of the report. For students to transfer between Universities he said he felt was not a problem. However, a problem lies with students transferring from college to university.

Currently, stated Rosehart, there is no way to guarantee the "integrity of a university degree". He added that not all instructors at college are guaranteed to have a PHD or teach the same material as that taught in universities.

The report centred out Wilfrid Laurier University on page 19 for the commitment made to Student Services. It states the Student Services Advisory Committee (SSAC) as a unique partnership between the university and its students.

SSAC is an arrangement that guarantees funding for Student Services. All expenses are split equally between the university and students. However, if the university wants additional money from the students for its initiatives it first has to put up half the funding.

"It is a way students can maintain services," said Rosehart.

He went on that the university could not unload the services on to the students. It keeps student services from feeling the pressure often created by the academic services.

"We are very fortunate that we have a sound relationship with our students," added Byron, "other universities hold us in envy."

Wilfrid Laurier University Students' Union President Kroeker expressed his gratitude that the task force gave credit to the students and university for the unique partnership. Additionally, the partnership allows any problems to be worked through. The arrangement empowers students by being apart of the decision making process.

"It allows students to be at the table rather than banging on the doors," said Kroeker.

Secret Plot of New Logos to Cost Students More

ASSMANGO KAY

A Discord investigation has revealed a secret plot hatched by the Students' Union to further exploit the thin pocket-books of Laurier students.

As many have noticed this year, a new WLUSU logo has been put in place. However, it is different from the "traditional" logo found in the Hall of Fame outside of Wilf's.

According to secret files obtained by The Discord, the Union plans to now create a similar logo adjacent to the current one as it starts a new tradition.

The plan is to add new and improved "traditional" logos on a monthly basis until the entire hallway is filled with them.

Banking on the sheeplike reluctance of WLU students to walk on the hawk, WLUSU plans to attach the same conditions to each new logo and therefore create a seemingly unpassable hallway.

Having ensconced the hallway with logos galore, WLUSU will then rent out jetpacks at the cost of $35 per trip.

For students who wish to use the bank machines or vending machines currently located in the hallway, a charge of $5 per minute in excess of thirty seconds will be applied.

An additional $10 charge will apply to patrons of Wilf's and the Centre Spot.

The scam, according to the secret documents, is in response to the University's plan to charge admission to the Torque Room.

"We cannot allow the administration to overtake us in the exploitation of students," reads the introduction to the proposal.

"We have a long-standing tradition of commercialization and have long been standing on the cutting edge of student exploitation. The JetPack Alpha initiative will only serve to reinforce our position as the national leader in this field and serve as a warning to the administration – particularly that money-grubbing Dean of Business – that we are still a force to be reckoned with on this campus."

In order to prevent any rebels such as those in the Discord from walking across the sacrosanct logos, the floor will be electrified and death-ray lasers will be mounted on flying office chairs specially sent in from Laurier Brantford.

A counter committee has been set up under the auspices of the Dean of Students' Office. Headed up by Dean David McMurray and Associate Dean Katherine Elliot, it is a pre-emptive maneuver designed to protect the Office's status.

"Our office is the only group on this campus mandated to whimsically and arbitrarily act against the interests of students," read the press release from CALLOUS [Committee Against Laurier Logo On Our Students].

"We strongly and vigorously protest the actions of WLUSU in this matter."

When asked for comment on the issue, outgoing WLUSU President Jeffrey Kroeker exclaimed "Screw-off! I'm going to clean my Internet Café!" before clubbing our staff reporter with his Presidential Scepter.

The funeral will be held in the Turret during the End-Of-Year Party.

Incoming WLUSU President Dave Prang merely chuckled at the insinuation that his administration was attempting to extract even more money from students..

"Obviously your research hasn't been EXTENSIVE enough," laughed Prang.

"I love Laurier!"

Incoming Discord Editor Arrested

Drug-induced search for hookers leaves editor in jail, newspaper in tizzy, hard-rocking girlfriend in shock and Baby Jesus in tears

DANIELLE CRAWFISH-HOLDER

In a shocking development, incoming Editor-in-Chief of the Discord Matt Kayd was arrested yesterday on four counts of drug possession and thirty-seven counts of solicitation.

Kayd's house was raided earlier in the day, and police found copious amounts of crack, heroin, marijuana, LSD and Ecstasy, as well as several vats of unidentified glue. Several packages of crack were also found in the pockets of his corduroy pants.

Police have had their eye on Kayd for some time now, as complaints have come from co-workers and friends who have described Kayd as "severely fucked up on crack."

In addition, Kayd faces charges of soliciting on campus, and over fifty female students have lodged complaints against him.

Witnesses say that Kayd has been spotted repeatedly cruising the Torque room, asking female students if they would like to "pet his monkey."

One female student, asked only to be identified as "Suzy" said, "It's really creepy the way he licks my arm while he's talking to me. I mean, he's a good guy, but when he asked me get busy behind the couches I was truly revolted."

Other female students relate that Kayd referred to them as "dirty whores" and asked them to get on with their "bizness" with him. Kayd offered chocolate bars in exchange for sexual favours.

It is also suspected that much of Kayd's solicitation took place while he was under the influence of drugs.

Mike Spankdon, Kayd's roommate, admitted to seeing Kayd lurking around the house and on campus, a constant film of white powder above his lips.

"For months now, he has had a real sniffing problem. We also found a lot of needles lying around the house," said Spankdon. "Needles are always falling out of his pockets. It's just gross."

In reaction to the news that Kayd had been arrested, his co-workers at the Discord responded with shock and surprise. Known to many around the school as "nice guy" and a "straight shooter", Kayd had fooled his peers, maintaining he had no interest in a wild and crazy lifestyle.

"Kayd is one of our most valuable volunteers here at the Discord", stated current Stupid Publications President Christian K. Spears.

"He would never solicit unwanted sexual favours. He's a crack-head, not a pervert."

Other editors came to his defence, saying that Kayd's bloodshot eyes and vacant stare were only as a result of staying up late writing overdue essays.

"I was flattered when Matt told me I could be his 'woman', but I had no idea that meant I had to have SEX with him," related Student Life Editor Reagan Staire.

Even Wilbur McVain, Sports Editor, reported that Matt propositioned him in a drug-induced haze.

"He kept touching my bum. I don't like when he touches my bum."

The hardest hit by the news of Kayd's arrest was girlfriend Cathy Street, also an editor at the Discord.

"I don't even know what to think. I mean, I thought I rocked hard, but all this time, he was rocking soooo hard," said Street. "I thought he was only borrowing that money for me to pay off his gambling debts, but drugs....I just don't know him anymore."

Street declined to comment on whether or not she would be posting bail.

On a sad note, there have been reports that Kayd's criminal behaviour has even reached the haloed ears of the Baby Jesus, causing Him to weep profusely.

Apparently Kayd had been suspected by several area priests, including the Baby Jesus, as being the Messiah in human form.

Recent events seem to have demonstrated that, if anything, Kayd is the Devil in human form.

A new EIC will be chosen soon to replace Kayd, but reports suggest that a crawfish that answers to the name "Joey" is the leading candidate to step up and take on the position.

"Joey" himself is still a doubtful successor, due to reputed mob ties.

It is rumored that "Joey" is the mastercrawfish behind the untimely deaths of several fellow crustaceans, including nearly a pound of East Baltimore mussels.

"Joey", possible gangsta' successor (above) and Street, stunned woman friend (below)

The wicko's obviously gone off the deep end...poor baby Jesus.

"He kept touching my bum. I don't like when he touches my bum."

Croaker: Complete Custodial Conquest

Onion President to clean TearAss

DAVE FIELD-TRIPP

The ongoing Harvey's saga hit a new low this week as Wilfrid Laurier University Students' Onion and Chief Frying Officer President Jeffrey Croaker was arrested for making death threats to various Harvey's officials.

Croaker was arrested by Waterloo Regional Police at Euler residence, after they received evidence that he had made threats to the Harvey's executives.

Croaker was held overnight awaiting his Monday morning hearing.

Charmaine Slummingham, the Executive Vice President of University Affairs, received the frantic call from Croaker late Sunday night. She then proceeded to assemble the Students' Onion Legal Resources department.

"I received the call from Jeffrey who was obviously distraught. I could see him ending up in this situation," said Slummingham. "The Harvey's ghost has haunted him all year."

The situation has been brewing for months, as Croaker had been unable to convince a burger facility to move into The Terrace Food Court.

After months of negotiations, nothing has happened. Croaker, attempting to fulfill one of his campaign promises started approaching other companies to move in and offer burger products.

The boiling point was at this Thursday's last Students' Onion Bored meeting, where the directors overwhelmingly turned down Croaker's proposal to create the Onion's own burger restaurant called "The Onion's House o' Burgers".

After this decision, Croaker was seen writing letters and using the fax machine.

Chair of the Bored, Eric McDavis recalls, "Croaker spent hours by the fax machine. I tried to say hi but he only responded, 'Die Harvey's Die'."

On Monday, in court the Crown presented a few of the faxes sent to the Harvey's officials.

The Crown Attorney quoted one of the letters as stating "You have made my life hell and I will not rest until I get my revenge. I hope you choke on your Church's Chicken."

Croaker asked for the judge's mercy, asking to be released so he could attend the Students' Onion volunteer awards ceremony Monday night.

The judge released him on $50 bail, and ordered him to spend the next six months cleaning the TearAss.

Croaker has also had a restraining order issued against him, stating he is not allowed to go within 200 metres of a Harvey's facility.

He was later photographed wielding a mop with a maliciously evil grin in the Onion BoredRoom.

There is serious concern that Croaker is a master of the ancient martial art of kendo, which utilizes giant sticks similar in size and heft to the mop he was brandishing.

Croaker cheers his light sentence: before his first custodial shift.

Internet Toilets hit the fan

MASEESH

Laurier students will finally be able to surf the net while making waves in the toilet bowl. In a long overdue move, Laurier has begun to install computer terminals in each campus washroom stall.

"The state of IT on this campus is no longer the shit. So we went one step further, and made the shit part of the experience," said SBE Dean Scott Starson.

Starson seemed overly excited with the possibility of generating a whole new revenue model by offering toilet seat advertising to companies like Research In Motion (RIM - get it?).

Fashion N' Motion has also expressed interest in the new form of advertising media.

"We feel Laurier should be the first place where the wonderful worlds of Information Technology and human waste expulsion come together in bliss," stated incoming WLUSO President Dave Wang.

"Plus, it's the only way you can look at porn websites while taking a dump - the best of both worlds."

When asked if the computer terminals will be similar to the Buck-A-Day Company's black IBMs that currently occupy the Terrace, Wang responded "Yes. But this time, we'll take precautions to ensure no one spills anything on these ones."

Focus groups are being conducted to design ergonomically superior toilets for the ultimate bowel moving experience (see picture).

The new toilets, referred to as I-Toilets, are expected to be completed in early June, which means they will actually be completed in late September.

The designers expect this to be the first in a wave of I-toilets, eventually resulting in the moving of the toilet out of the confines of the washroom, and into the living room, kitchen and even office, like the prototypes now found in Stupid Publications.

REAL SCHOOL SPIRIT

I'm tired of the Discord always bashing volunteer work at the school! Why must you always trash volunteers? If you had any volunteers working up there, you would know what I was talking about!

And who do you think you are when you talk about school spirit being more than just yelling cheers?

True school spirit and respect does not include figuring out what's right, what's wrong and what needs to be fixed at this school - it only includes blindly following whatever the majority thinks constitutes spirit!

I hope you arrogant pricks get off your high horses one day and realize other people besides yourself have valid opinions!

WLUSP IS FULL OF LOVE

I just want to congratulate Stupid Publications for being the most forgiving, most inclusive organization on this campus. I mean, you guys even have on your Board the guy who ripped the Discord and insulted its editor in probably the most offensive way possible! Wow! You guys should have my job!

POOR MONETARY SPENDING

I am writing to express my concern with the alleged donation being made by the Students' Onion to health and wellness at Laurier. I am shocked and dismayed by this obvious display of selfishness on the part of Jeff Croaker and Paul Bambourine.

Why can't we spend the money on fishsticks?

SURVIVOR'S FOR SUCKERS

After a week of extra thought, I've discovered that I don't like Survivor and I especially don't enjoy the thought of including a corporate sponsor on campus. For this reason, I have decided to renounce my crown as ultimate Laurier Survivor. As a form of protest, I plan on enclosing myself inside the big cage again in the middle of the Concourse and playing the theme from Survivor FOREVER, until someone pays me lots of money and brings me some good food, and a monster truck, and an internet toilet, and a mop...and fishsticks, yeah, fishsticks. Okay, I don't hate Survivor, I just want attention. Please bring me fishsticks.

STUPID PUBLICATIONS IS FOR ME!

I must express my great dismay with not being able to turn Stupid Publications upside down like I promised to.

After a great deal of thought, I realized I'm a chump and shouldn't open my stupid mouth before I'm left in the water without a life jacket.

I also like wearing shorts in -10 degree weather to show off my swollen ankles.

Can you guess who I am?
